The earliest arrivals, lean, long, and weeldy, were full well by others by still mer, comely and thaiffy guests,-The first conter were clearly the hungriest.

The floor of the court disappeared under no ever-thickening empor of rats. There were black rats, brown rats, tawry rats, yellow rats, chestaut rats, rats of orders gener, slite of the lists, and even white rats. advanced from the mass a detachment of rats bolder and more absenturous than the rest. They reached in three columns, and in the form of a triangle, up to the easenss, of which they talk posts sion. It was a successful nathary reconnoissance. Their other companions, thus one arrayed, charged with much greater results and the leaders' clitabed up the horse' thanks, rapped up its skin from one end to the other, just as a tailor unstitches in all coat to tear it up into rags, and then hundreds, thousands, myriad, streamed in at every aperture, crowding thick and anxiously, like an audience rushing out of a theatre on fire. They sciamble over one another, and their rustling movements, their little shrill whistlings, inaudible at first, produced by their multiplication the hum and humor of a crowd, in which you could almost fancy you heard the saind of human voices. Life was boiling in the animate I mass. It made you shudder to think of what would be your fate were you to fall in the midst of it from our perch on the wall.

The Montfaucon rats had opened the horse; and they cut it up, hoared it, riddled it through and through and chopped it into mince meat. The work of destruction was hidden from sight a few minutes afterwards, the horse having completely disappeared beneath the hideous brutes, who, hanging on, with the veracious precision of leeches to its rounded form, soon offered the spectacle of a magnificent horse composed of thousands of living rats, after the fashion of the shell work toys and orgaments that are made to represent men and animals.

"Now let in the dogs!" was the second word of command given by Bri-sot Thivare to his man.

The dogs entered the atena, and the carnage began. The first two minutes were glorious for them. They were mad with joy. Election .- On Monday, 4th inst., E. Hershey, Esq., was elected President of the Columbia Manufacturing Company, in place of Mr. Harford Traley, resigned. Mr. Hershey is well known as an energetic man of business, and in his hands the affairs of the company are likely to progress rapidly and favorably. We hope, at no distant day, to see the works of the Manufacturing Company among the largest and most flourishing in the State.

duty entered the guard room. "Attention!" commanded the serjeant and, saluting his superior, made the usual report that nothing worth remarking had happened. The officer, a young ensign fresh from the military school, and almost a boy, took no notice whatever of this important news, but asked the sergeant in a brisk and somewhat impetuous manner:-

"What he was again striking the men

The serjeant already much annoyed at this interference gave a surly and unwilling answer; and, when the young officer rebuked him, in a severe and perhaps somewhat haughty manner, the violent and passionate man, losing all self control, lifted up his hand against his officer.

It was but one fatal moment, quick as lightning. The uplifted hand never descended; it was caught by a dozen powerful arms. He was felled to the ground, and disarmed. Half an hour afterwards he found himself in irons in the casemates.

Lifting the arm against a superior is considered a capital crime. In this case it had been committed whilst both parties were on duty, and the Austrian Military laws are the very last in the world to be trifled with. The following day he was tried by courtmartial, and sentenced to be shot. When the sentence was forwarded to the compe tent authority for ratification, it happened to be the superior's anniversary day; capital punishment was commuted, the criminal had to run the gauntlet.

A cruel act of grace was this commutation! When the first sentence had been read over to him, he had remained cold and impassable; not a muscle of his proud face of course, to pay his respects a few days stirred. He did not fear death; he had looked it in the face many a time without flinching, and to die in the open air, pierced by a dozen balls—a soldier's death—what should be care much for that? When he had renched at last the left wing of the company, his lacerated back presented a frightful appearance. Even his most exasperated enemies would have been satisfied now; if it had but been possible, the commanding officer himself would have interceded in his behalf; but this was not even to be thought of; the law must have its course. They faced him right about; he had to make the same way back again.

When the victim had arrived at the file impatience.

""Oh," quietly remarked our absorbed Grecian, 'they are naturalists.'

"A few days after this the same team was engaged for this identical trip by a party of Bostonians. As they rattled along the turnpike through the Notch, one of them said to the driver, who was delightedly ruminating on the contrast between his present orderly company and the troublesome party he had been so perplexed with a day or two before—

The floor not being very clean, (floors seldom are in these localties,) and the white another cleam, (floors seldom are in these localties,) and the white deficient and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, at his tormentors. Then he was seen staggering like a drunken man towards the commanding officer. His eyes, swollen with blood, beamed with an unnatural brightness, his respiration was short and painful; touching his head with his right he lent a helping hand to their endeavors by an application of the sad equipment of every Austrian non-commissioned officer—

The floor not being very clean, (floors and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts, and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contempts and the dreadful execution was over at last, he threw one last, 7 long look, full of contem leader of the right wing of his company, every Austrian non-commissioned officer- with a rattling sound, but that was nevertheless distinctly audible all over the place: cutting away at the men with a powerful "I have to thank your honor for this exquisite punishment," and fell down dead.

> A New French Story .- A charmingly proper note of invitation to a ball was received, not long since, by young Monsieur Gaillard, a handsome and agreeable bachelor of twenty-five! With Barond'A-, the giver of the ball, he was not aware that he had the honor of acquaintance; but, supposing, as was frequently the case, that some kind female friend had taken pains to procure the invitation for him, he left his card, with his acceptance, at the Baron's door, the next day, according to etiquette; and on the appointed evening, he presented himself with the fashionable crowd. Expecting, that, in the course of his pro menades about the rooms, he should meet the friend to whose kindness he was in debted, he thought to begin the evening properly by asking the daughter of his host -to whom he had made his bow on entering, led up by the master of ceromonies-for the first quadrille.

Accepted as a partner, and chancing to dance and demean himself with peculiar elegance, he made unexpected progress in the acquaintance, and ventured-a few dances after-to ask her hand again.

Once more upon the floor with Made noislle d'A---, and the music changing suddenly to a waltz, he again was favored by Fortune; for, his speciality was to give admirable support to his partner in that particular movement of the dance. She was borne around by him, as if buoyed baloon-like, in the air-feeling and looking charmingly.

Briefly-that ball was the "ball set in motion." for Monsieur Gaillard! He called, afterwards, and was graciously received .-On the wholly unexplained mystery of his being invited, both parties delicately forconversation.

The proposal was made.

It was blushingly accepted. Monsieur Gaillard stated his respectabilities of birth and connection, and that came round. "By the way," said the Baron, after all was arranged, "my daughter's destiny seems to have hung on this particular name. A very old friend had written to me, proposing the hand of his nephew-another Monsieur Gaillard-and, for the sake of seeing him, we had sent him an invitation to the same ball we had the pleasure of first seeing you. As he did not make his appearance, you are, in his proposed place! But my daughter has, still, nominally at least, car-The happy fiance saw through the mystery, in a moment. The note of in vitation, for the other Monsieur Guillard, had been mistakenly left at his doorl But he was very careful not to explain 'he enigma to the confiding Baron till after the ceremony.
