ers of abuse, and even in the Provinces, Mrs. Moriarty's language had pessed into currency. The dictionary of Dublin alang had been considerably enlarged by her, and her voluble impudence had almost become proverbial. Some of O'Connell's friends. however, thought that he could beat her in the use of her own weapons. Of this, however, he had some doubts himself, when he had listened once or twice to some minor specimens of her Billingsgate. It was mooted once whether the young Kerry barrister could encounter her, and some one of the company (in O'Connell's presence) rather too freely ridiculed the idea of his heing able to meet the famous Madame Moriarty. O'Connell never liked the idea of being put down, and he professed his rendiness to encounter her, and even backed himself for the match. Bets were offered and taken-it was decided that the match should come off at once.

The party adjourned to the huckster's stall, and there was the owner herself. superintending the sale of her wares-a few loungers and ragged idlers were hanging fair promises to exceed in interest all its round her stall-for Biddy was a "character," and in her way, was one of the sights of Dublin.

O'Connell was very confident of success He had laid an ingenious plan for overcoming her, and, with all the anxiety of ar ardent experimentalist, waited to put it into practice. He resolved to open the attack. At this time O'Connell's own party, and the loungers about the place formed an audience quite sufficient to arouse Mrs. Moriarty, on public provocation, to a due exhibition of her powers. O'Connell commenced the attack.

"What's the price of this walking stick, Mrs. what's your name?"

"Moriarty, is my name, and a good one it is; and what have you got to say agin it? and one and sixpence's the price of the stick. Troth, it's a chenp as dirt, so it is."

"One and sixpence for a walking-stick!! whew! why you are no better than an imposter, to ask eighteen pence for what cost you twopence."

"Twopence your grandmother," replied Mrs. Biddy; "do you mean to say that it's cheating the people I am! imposter indeed!" "Ay, imposter; and it's that I call you to your teeth," rejoined O'Connell. "Come, cut your stick; you cantankerous jackanapes." "Keep a civil tengue in your head, you chi diayonal," cried O'Connell, culmiy. "Stop your jaw, you pug-nosed badger, or I'll make you go quicker nor you come.

"Easy, now-easy, now," cried O'Connell, with imperturbable good humor, "don't choke opportunity. We read of sad loss to Daniel, yourself with fine language, you old whiskeydrinking parallelogram."

Weat's that you call me, you murderin' villaiu!" roared Mrs. Moriapty, stung into the less varied and interesting for the disfury. "I call you," answered O'Connell, "a par-
