Some furbuts hold this opinion, and practice up on it in the training of their children, defending themselves by saying that as long as they do not play for money there is no harm. But gambling does not depend en PAPER. tirely on the love of gain, as their defence itssumes. There are three main supports of gaming-the love of excitement-the love of gain-and the love of triumph. Some persons gamble mainly because they must have excitement of some kind. They have become habituated to it and cannot leave without it: It must be intense excitement too; or it will fireside, the companionship of good books inouer is staked, they are put on the direct road to gambling; for sooner or later such of some wager to call out the best efforts of the players, and give zest to the game:

Then again there is the love of triumphing over an opponent, which is an element distinct from the love of gain. A money making man once remarked to us, "You tifinisters are mistaken when you assume that it is avarice which makes us so eager in our scramble for money. It is not so; for fordetimes we care very little about the monev itself. But we trize success; we are unwilling to be beaten or outdone in the con-

Moreover, those parents who tenels their children to play cards at home, rob them of their best defence against the arts of the gambler abroad. Their sons are not always to remain at home. We are a traveling peoble, and the wandering propensity is increasing upon us. We have journeyed more than our fathers, and our children will journey more than we. We know not into what company they will fall: But they will of course be met by the accompilshed gambler traveling in the disguise of a gentleman .-They will be politely asked to play cards. about cards," they will be armed as with a coat of mail against temptation. Mr. Fisher succeeded Mr. Menges, and while doncurring with the lecturer in the necessity of reform in prison discipline, yet could from his own professional experience, testify to improvements which were making their way among the peniteutiaries and county prisons of the country.

Rev. S. Appleton argued that of the three notives for the punishment of criminalsvengeance, example and reform—the last two only were admisssible. The motive of a parent in justly punishing a child should be the true model on which to base the punishment of an offender against the laws.

Much has been said of the Eastern Esculapius' labors for the sick; not one half has yet been told of the indomitable perseverance of this singular man. Imbued with the conviction that Scrofula is the parent of disease, he has been years engaged in searching the boundaries of the earth, for its antidote. With vast labor has he canvassed the products of sea and land, through both continents until he has discovered that combination of remedials which expurses this human rot and corruption from the system. This new invention we now offer in our columns under the name of Aver's SARSAPAR-ILLA, although its virtues are from sul stances far more active and effectual than Sarsaparilla.—Mercantile Journal.
