"Because your name is Arabella." "Very well, sir-if you do not like my name you need not repeat it."

"I adore it; it is not that: - Forgive me." "Then I will get my hat?" and her light funt-stone topoed pour the stairs."

Here was a state of things! Where was my firmness and my resolution now? Where was the Pythian probity, for which, accordpoured Damonian gratitude upon me? Was my family.

If her name was anything but Arabella -anything the initial of which was not A, then I could have justified myself: but now -and I was about to teach her billiarde!-To what depth of depravity had I come at last!

She rejoined me, beaming with anticipation, and radiant with the exercise of running down stairs. Together we entered the billiard-room.

"Now this I declare: the ball-room, with its flashing lights, intoxicating performes, and regaley doth woman expand and glow among them; in numberless ways, and aidod by numberles accessories, do faminine graces nimbly and sweatly recommend themseives ento our pleasant senses; but this I will forever and ever say, that nowhere, either in gorgeous hall, or gilded opera-box, or in any other place, or under any other circumstances, may such bewildering and residious power of maidealy enchantment be exercised as at the billiard table; especfally when the enchantress is utterly ignorunt of the duties required of her, and confidingly seeks manly encouragement and guidance. Controlled by the hand of beauty, the cue becomes a magic wand, and the balls are no langer bits of inanimate ivory, but poked resistlessly hither and thisher circulating messengers of fascination.
I know, for I have been there.

Had Miss Tarlingford turned her thoughts towards the bowling-alley, I might without difficulty have retained my self-possession; for her sex are not charming at ten-pins.— They stride rampant, and hurl danger around them, aiming anywhere at random; or they make small skips and screams, and perform ridiculous flings in the air, injudrop balls with unaffected languor, and devel op at an early stage of proceedings a tendency to gutters, above which they can never rise shrupobent; and all this is annoving, and fit only for Bloomers, who can be degraded by nothing on earth.

But billiardel what statuesque pictures, what freedom of gesture, what swaying grace and vivacious energy this game in-volves! And then the attendant distraction—the pinching together of the hands to too strong—to our pockets an unwonted the needed notch, the perfect art of which, like fist-clenching, is unattainable pan, who substitutes some queerness -the flerce grasping and propulsion of the cue—the loving reclension upon the table when the long shots come in he dainty foot uprising, to perserve the owner's balance, but, as it gleams suspended, destroying the observer's—all combine, as they did this time, to scatter stern promptings of duty beyond recalling.

First, Arabella's little hand must be moulded into a bridge, and, being slow to cramp itself correctly, though pliant as a politician's conscience, the operation of folding it together had to be many times repented. Next, shots must be made for her, she retaining her hold of the cue, to get into the way of it. Then all went on smoothly Next, shots must be made for her with her, turbulently with me, until, enground.

My game was up!

We were alone. Arabella pearched upon the table, jubilant at having achieved pocket—I dismal and blue, beside her. There take me down " she said

I looked around through each window, clined my ear to the door, swept an arm around her waist, and forgot to proceed.

"Oh, Arabella! Arabella! wherefore art thou Arabella!"

"Do you wish I were semebody else;"
