We have drunk of the wine of Life, We have drained the cup to the lees, And after the struggle, the battle, the strife, We lough at man and miscries.

Yes' we at a changing shrine Once knelt and adored and prayed; And the short-lived goddess was always divine, In the light of our love arrayed.

Yes, we, too, suffered and wept. And hope's gay visions were ours. And the dreams that came to us while we slept, Were decked in young fancy's flowers.

And the prize, when the race was done, With its toruring hopes and fears, Was it worth the anguishit co-t when won, In those foolish, early years?

Then we're wondrous witty and gay, And we mock every earnest hourt— While we marvet thatever, in his's duff play, We played such a passionate part.

To have lost our belief in truth.
To have lost our deep faith in love.
To have lost our deep faith in love.
And our hope in a heaven above.

To be savant, punster, and wet. And sought for at dinner and ball, To affect the last fashion, and under it To inde from the eye of all. The weary, desentished breast,

So capty and joyless and cold— While we sheer at man's fody and wild unjest In the battle of life so bold.

Oh! better the earliest death.
Ere the freshness of childhood had past.
Than years to dragon of slow, hagering breath
And to die so tred at last.

My neighbor's house hath sloping caves,
And where the rathers inter-cet.
Whene'er she wills, a swallow weaves
Her nest—a during architect!
My neighbor with his lawver's eye,
Long time are the tre-pass saw,
But knew an action would not he:
Possession is nice points of law.

Beneath those caves rose clusters frame The sweet dreamspic tire of a mail. A: hours, as whore this more she came, Drawing saide her lattice shade. To feed her swallows—small on may Ob, till that reoment when she stands Aim-silcoping, how we year in o see— I and those birds—her lips and hands!

Beneath the caves of her pure breast, Trespassing on its still domain, My image dares to make its nest; How could it ever entrance gam? And such alten innocence How must it dwell in restless a we! O swallow; cheer my troubled sense; Possession is nine points of law.

Be all my fortunes fair as thing!
The careful eye that doubtful sees
Thy trespuss must discover must.
That dragon of the Hesperdes,
The lawyer watching o'er his word,
lies lost one talon of his cleiw.
And yet may find his action buryd:
Possession is mise points of law.

"Well, Monsteur Robert Housin," Louis his household.

At the begining of Nevember I received a "command" to St. Cloud, to give a preformance before Louis Phillippe and his family. I accepted the invitation with the greatest pleasure, for, as I had never preformed before a crawned head, this was an important event for me.

"How can that be? the handkerchiefs are important event for me."

Poetry.

Tired of Life.

Yes! we, too, were passionate fools, Loving and dying for love; Once ours the heart no philosophy schools, And the bosomy prayer could move.

But, oh! how the glory died, From our love and hope and trust; And how borne dewn by our pitiess tide, Our goddesses crumbied to dust.

We have drained the wine of life, To the goblet's biterest lees; And we look back after the turmoil and strife, To lough at our mi-eries.

But we sometimes pause in our jest, To inquire if n's genul mirth; And wonder sometimes if it always is best, To be weary or heaven and earth,

And neither to live nor to die, But to deag out our shortearng chain, With a minth that most always end in a sigh. And laughter alhed to pain.

To be older in soul than years.
To be heavily hearing our life—
Oh! better the hart-sig gh ipes and the fears,
Of that bygone tempest and strice.

tranquil moment only added to the violence of the succeeding paroxysm.

Passing down the Rue St. Honore, they reached the jeweller M——, before mentioned, when the lady pulled the string of the coach and alighted. Upon entering the shop, she desired M—— to take the packet of jewels, and accompany her in her coach, assuring him of his pay as soon as she reached the hotel of the comte, adding, with a fascinating smile, that he could have no apprehensions, since the jewels were still in his keeping. The jeweler.

"M insieur Robert Houdin, may I be per tor, in an upder tone.

"To what am I indebted," said the comte, "I turned my head in the direction, and "This iron box, continuing six handkerehleft, was placed among the control of this visit?"

"I turned my head in the direction, and recognized the King, who, having asked the question merely as a form of introduction, and and respectfully to walk forward to me.

"The same," replied he, with a slight bow. "My name is N—," rejoined the doctor.

"I have drespectfully.
