IN ARTICULO MORTE.-It is our melanholy duty to announce that the poor Union with which so many anxious political friends 'sat up" through the late straggle, is at ength seized with the death throes, and cannot last much longer than through the night. South Carolina, that indispensable member-the very heart, it may be called, from its importance-of the confederacy, declares that th Union shall no longer exist. That long suffering State is resolved that the oup of its bitterness has at length overflowed, and it won't stand it any longer, it won't. It will set up for itself, and to show its capacity for business tolls its Northern creditors to whistle for their dues. It has fully resolved to "go out," no matter whether followed by its big sisters-who should lead instead of being led-or not. The Southern heart is "fired," and we ail know that when that state of combustion is attained nothing can arrest the destructive element. The state of affairs about that excitable region must be indeed alarming .-No mention is made as to the fuel applied to keep up the above conflagration, but from unmistakable indications we may safely conclude that whisky is not far distant when they "coal up."

The stars and stripes have been repudiated, and the Southern mind is now exercised over a fitting drapeau for the new state---Kingdom, Empire, Principality, Electorate, or what not. The rattlesnake appears to be the favorite representative reptile with these amateur heralds; we would suggest the electrical col as a more fitting symbol of the touch-me not disposition of the belligerent State. The rattlesnake does not go through the world heralding his courage, and chivning, and independence, by incessant agitation of his tail .-He waits until he is in danger-then sounds a fair alarm and strikes. PennProfessor Newberry, in his paper read before the American Scientific Association, at Newport, B. L. gave a vivid description of the geographical features of the great plateaux sweeping east and west from the Rocky mountains, allustrated by colored drawings. His well-browned, fiercely-beard drawings. His well-browned, fiercely-beard drawings. His well-browned, fiercely-beard with the color of the affect of the sun and winds on the vast treeless plains that skirt the Colorado. He incidentally gave a most interesting description of that strange people, the Moqui, whose cities we have seen in New Mexico, and but a small remnant of whom now exist. Professor Newberry thinks they may be the remains of the Axtecs, who were displaced by the Axtecs, Mr. Newberry described them as a race apparently entirely distinct from any other Indians on this Continent. They are small-greated to the seen and this Continent. They are small-greated to the seen the continent. They are small-greated to the seen they could now be referred to the Toltees, who were displaced by the Aztecs, Mr. Newberry described them as a race apparently entirely distinct from any other Indians on this Continent. They are small-greated to the seen they come of the seen they come of the seen they come of the seen that they are to be referred to the Toltees, who were displaced by the Aztecs.

Mr. Newberry described them as a race apparently entirely distinct from any other Indians on this Continent. They are small-greated to these who have and persecution in his cause. When the continent in his cause. When the continent is a continuation of the seen in the propose of the continuation of the seen in New Mexico, and but a small remnant who now exist, it seems more probable that they are to be referred to the Toltees, who were displaced by the Aztecs.

Mr. Newberry described them as a race apparently entirely distinct from any other Indians on this Continent. They are small-greated to the season of the country described to the season of the continuation of
