the Lancaster Express, by request: LOCAL SECESSION-BIG PILLS US. LITTLE PILLS -The favorite electioneering digdment in the South during the last campaign was, that if the people constitutionally elected a President distasteful to that Section; the Cotton States would secede. This assumption was so monstrously wrong, in the estimation of all lovers of the Union and the Constitution, that few men in their sober senses were willing to believe it. Recent events, however, show that those who control public sentiment in some of the Southern States were in earnest-but we were hardly prepared to believe that the same principle would be used here in Lancaster, to coerce submission, and that too by gentlemen so respect. able, bland and courteous as the members of the medical profession. Recent developements, however, lead us reluctantly to the conclusion that secension, in a certain contingency, has been threatened in Lancaster, and that the threats liave not been carried out simply because they were the means of preventing the contingency deprecated.

It is well known to many of our citizens that for two or three years past a desire has been expressed by a large number of highly respectable tax-payers, to see the Homeopathic practice of medicine tested in the County Hospital. in comparison with the Allonathic system. It was proposed that one Homeopathic physician be elected out of the four now employed there and that he treat every fourth patient, not in any way interfering with the patients treated If allopathically. A similar plan has been pursued in many other hospitals, in flid Country and in Europe, and the Homopathists dilege, that the results have been favorable to their system. This is denied by physicians of the old school, and hence the desire of many who are not disciples of the new system, to see the question settled by a practical comparison of the two systems. At first sight, it would be supposed that a proposition so reasonable would

Governor Curtin's Inaugural. On Tuesday Governor Curtin was inaugurated at Harrisburg, with appropriate ceremonies. His Inaugural Address was calu and conciliatory in its tone, and gives general satisfaction. We give a brief abstract

The Governor commenced by saying: Deeply impressed with its responsibilities and duties, I enter upon the office of Gov-ernor of Pennsylvania, with a determination day, and we welcome our old friend once to fulfit them all faithfully to the utmost of my ability. Questions of great moment in timately connected with the feelings and in-terests of the people of all parts of the Nathe Nation, now agitate the public mind; and some of them, from their novelty and impor-tance, are left for settlement in the uncertainty of the fature. A selfish caution might indicate silence as the safest course to be pursued as to these questions, by one just entering upon the responsibilities of high official position; but fidelity to the high trust reposed in me demand, especially at this juncture, that I yield to an ustom which requires a frank declaration of the principles to be adopted, and the pol cy to be pursued during my official term. He first alludes to our Common Schoo System:

Our system of Common Schools will eve enlist my carnest solicitude. For its growing wants the most ample provision should be made by the Legislature. I feel that I need not urge this duty.

He promises a rigid economy in the finan cial administration of the affairs of the State: A rigid economy in all its various depart public officers, are expected by our people and they shall not be disappointed. debt of the State is in the course of steady liquidation, by the ordinary means o the treasury, all unnecessary expenditures of the public money must be firmly resisted so that the gradual diminution of the in lebtedness shall not be interrupted.

He says that the pardoning power shall be executed with careful discrimination .-Ile recommends the passage of general law for the chartering of Corporations. He thinks the veto power should be exercised with great caution.

The billinde of the Message, nearly two thirds, is devoted to the consideration of the Mational Crisis: The Governor is eminently conservative, and his address will not be without its peaceful influence on the troubles of the country. Hs says:

I have alrealy taken occasion to say puband I now rep at, that if we have any laws upon our statute books which infringe upon the rights of the people of any of the States or contravene any law of the Federal Gor crament, or obstruct its execution, they ought to be repealed. We ought not to hes itate to exhibit to other States have enacted laws interfering with the right or obstructive of the remedies which belong constitutionally to all American citizens, an example of magnanimity and of implicit obedience to the paramount law, and by a prompt repeal of every statute that may even, by implication, be liable to reasonable ubjection, do our part to remove every just cause of dissetlsfaction with our legisla In the present unhappy condition of the country, it will be our duty to unite with the people of the States which remain loyal to the Union, in any just and honorable mea sures of conciliation and fraternal kindness Let us invite them to join us in the fulfilment of all our obligations under the Federal Constitution and laws. Then we can cordially unite with them in claiming like obedience from those States which have renounced their allegiance. If the loyal States are just and moderate, without any sacrifice of right or self respect the threatened danger may be averted

The address concludes:

I assume the duties of this high office at the most trying period of our national history. The public mind is ugitated by fears, suspicions and jealousies. Serious appreliensions of the future pervade the people .-organized effort has A preconcerted and been made to disturb the stability of Government, and dissolve the union of the States, and mar the symmetry and order of way we know of to demonstrate that fact and the noblest political structure ever devised which you have reposed in me, and to de-serve your approbation. Senator Powell's amendment to the first proposed amendment to the Constitution, so as to make it read, "in ments and a strict accountability from all all the Terfitories now held or hereafter ac. quired south of said line of latitude statement may seem, and unparalleled as slavery of the African race is hereby recognized as existing," &c., was adopted, yeas 29, nays 24, all the Republicans voting York. in the negative. The Compromise having been burthened with this criwise and needless aniendment was abandored, and after some debate Senator Clarke's resolutions were adopted as a substitute by a vote of yeas 25, nays 23. This substitute declares that the provisions of the present Constitution are ample, that it needs to be obeyed rather than amended; that all attempts to dissolve the Union with an idea to its reconstruction are illusory and destructive, that no such reconstruction is practicable, and that therefore the energies of the Government and the efforts of good citizens should be directed to the preservation of the existing Union and Constitution. A PALPABLE Hit .- One terribly stormy night in bleak December, a United States vessel was wrecked off the coast of Jersey, and every soul, save one, went down with the doomed craft. This one survivor, a and was washed towards the shore, while innumerable kind hearted tools of the Camdea and Amboy Railroad clusterel on the beach with ropes and boats. Slowly but surely the unhappy mariner drifted to land. and as he exhaustedly caught at the rone thrown to him, the kindly natives uttered an encouraging cheer. "You are saved." they shouted. "You are saved-and must show the conductor your ticket." With the sea still boiling about him, and a floating, straw tickling his nose, the drowning stranger suddenly resisted the efforts to haul him ashore. "Stop!" said he, in a faint tone "Tell me, where am I? What country is this?" And they answered, "New Jersey." Scarcely had the name been uttered, when panies of United States troops surrendering lating as he did so, "I guess I'll float a little further!" He was never seen again.
