ADVANCE OF GEN. M'CLELLAN. MUNSON'S HILL OCCUPIED.

The Rebel Flag displaced by the Stars and Stripes

The first step is taken, and the flag of the Union proudly waves over Munson's Hill .-The enemy abandoned his position without firing a gun, and the soldiers of the Union on Sanday worshipped Gid, upon the heights from which the rebel banner has so long floated. The victory is no less complete because achievel without the shedding of blood. The rebals are believed to be in full retreat, and it is not credited that their withdrawal means anything but a retreat -Though we are ready, quite ready, to receive them "above and below the Capitol," it is not at all probable they will attempt to cross the Patoina . On the entra v. their retreat, it is believed will be general along their whole line, and, with McCiellan's well equipped and now well disciplined army following up their rear, they can scarcely affer l to stop this side of Richmond. It is emsidered possible, Lowever, that Beauregard and Johnson have a given point of meeting, where there are masked batteries and formidable entrenchments, and to which point, is believed by them, our forces can be decoved. In a word, whatever may be the rebel plan, Gen. McClellan is fully up to it, lar per year. O e would think the amount and the army of the Union will hereafter ha movement of our army will not be a hurried and uncautions one, hence it will certainly result triumphantly, and the wholesale sacrifice of valuable lives will be avoided.

It was determined on Friday, at a council of war held at the headquarters of Gen. Scott, that an advance should be made, and within four hours afterwards the enemy preparel for fight. This may be a coincidence, but it is more likely that information of our intended movement was carried directly to the rebel camp. Rebel spies abound here still, and they constantly manage ingeniously to send over to the enemy all the information they so ingeniously manage to oh tain. It is impossible to prevent this; at all events it is not now of great consequence. as nothing can be said which will not serve to impress the enemy with the midness of making any serious resistance to the immense army of McClellan.
