and Handred and Tenth Pennsylvania Regiments were also well up in the woods. The Sixty-sixth Ohio, Colonel Candy, was direct-Dixty-sixth Onio, Coloner Chady, was directly in the rear of the battery, composed of the rear of the battery, composed of the rear of Columbia and vicinity that he has just three guns of Captain Clark's Battery, three blown in his celebrated. guns of Captain Huntington's and one of Captain Robinson's Battery, under Lieutenant Colonel Hayward, and upon him and His gallant band depended everything at this critical moment; and the duty was well and all other fish that awim the Susquehanna River in the control of the colonel of the and gallantly executed. Had they given way the command must have been lost.— The left wing of Colonel Candy's Regiment was entended into the woods and close in the rear of the battery, which position they held until a retreat was ordered. Additional reinforcements of the enemy were coming up on our right, having abou-doned their position on the left, and I ordered the Eighty-fourth and One-Hundred and Tenth down to the right, but before they had reached the position assigned them the enemy was in full retreat before our brave men, and I at enco ordered them across into the woods again. Under cover of the en-gagement on our right the enemy had thrown another force into the woods, and pressed them down upon our batteries on the left. So rapid was this movement that they passed the line on which the Eighty-fourth and One Hundred and Touth were ordered un observed - making a dash upon the battery no sudden and unexpected as to compel the cannoniers to abandon their pieces.

Colonel Candy met the enemy with his regiment with great coolness, his men fighting with commendable bravery. The Seventh and Fifth Ohio were soon supporting him, driving the enemy from their position and retaking the battery. The artillery offi-cers made a strong effort and used great exertions to remove their guns, but (the horses having been killed or disabled) found it impossible. The enemy had given way along the whole line, but I saw heavy reinforce ments crossing from the the town that would have been impossible for us successfully to resist. After consulting General Carroll, I ordered the troops to fall back under his direction, with a view of retreating until we should meet the reinforcements of Generals Kimball and Ferry.

General Carroll took command of the covering of the retreat, which was made in perfect order; and save the stampede of those who ran before the fight was fairly opened, the retreat was quite as orderly as the ad-

The force engaged under my command could not have exceeded 3,000 men. Of the enemy's force (my information comes from the prisaners taken by us) none of them estimated it at less than 8,000 men actually in the engagement.

The loss of our artillery we feel almost as keenly as we should to have lost our colors, yet it was impossible to save them without nimals to drag them through the deep mud-the men could not do it. While we deeply feel this loss, we have the satisfaction of knowing that we have one of theirs, captured by the Fifth Ohio and driven off in full view of their whole force—sixty-seven prisoners following it to this post.

It will not be expected that I can mention the many gallant actions of the different officers upon that hard fought field. Yet I canjustice to my own feelings without remarking that, in my opinion, braver, more determined and willing men never entered a battle-field. General Carroll distinguished higself by his coolness and dashing bravery. Upon him I relied, and was not disappointed. For heroic gallantry I will place Colonel Gavin, Colonel Buckley, Lieutenant Colonel Creighton, Colonel Dunning, Colonel Tho-borne, Colonel Candy, and Lieutenant Colonel linyward, beside the bravest men of the United States army. The line officers of the different regiments discharged their duty nobly, and deserve special mention by their Colonels. Captains Clark, Robison and Huntingdon served their guns with great credit, and deserve particular notice.

To the members of your staff, Lieutenant Colonel Shriber, Captain Kelley and Captain Keegh, I am under many, very many obligations, for the prompt, efficient and officer-like manner in which they discharged the duties assigned them. The two latter were in the field through the hottest of the cogngement, exposed to the enemy's fire from first to last. Captain Kelley received a severe wound in the face, while urging for ward the men, and was carried off the field.

For a list of the casualties of the engagement I respectfully refer you to the report of the several regiments, accompanying this served scythe, the fact of their heavy force before us is an evidence that they suffered severely.

Aide-de-Camp Easton was the only officer of my own Staff present. Captain Quny being too ill to take the field, Chaplain D. C. Wright, of the Seventh Ohio, volunteered to serve me. The duties these gentlemen were called upon to perform were arduous, and led them almost constantly under the fire of the enemy. Yet they executed their duties with commendable coolness and ener gy, meriting my warmest thanks.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

Brigadier General.
