

SAMUEL WRIGHT, Editor and Proprietor.

"NO ENTERTAINMENT SO CEAP AS READING, NOR ANY PLEASURE SO LASTING."

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE; $2,00 IF NOT IN ADVA

VOLUME XXXIV, NUMBER 16.]

COLUMBIA, PENNSYLVANIA, SATURDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 15, 1862.

can be laid to your charge. I have neither | Lady Everton's narrative. Repeatedly dur- as swiftly vanished. He did not know how | villain's eyes as I accidentally, as it were | some private passage which might, unknown | courage, fortitude and strength of character PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY MORNING. right nor inclination to inquire further. To ing the course of it, as she incidentally al | little I needed spurring to gain the goal he announced my errand and intention! They to me, exist. than our women of similar age, on erenter Office in Carpet Hill, North-westcorner of Front and Locust streets. Rousing myself, as soon as the play was morrow, in all probability, I shall send for luded to the manner and appearance of had in view. fairly flashed with gleel Ah. Sanford Santougher physical endurance thin they

Terms of Subscription.

Rates of Advertising. dart[6 ines]one week, $0.38 " three weeks, $0.38 [12]ines]one weeks, $0.38 [12]ines]one weeks, $1.00 enclisubsequentinsertion, 25 [13]ines non-weets, $1.00 enclisubsequentinsertion, 25

Poetry.

The Parting of Ulysses.

AN HOMERIC REMINISCENCE. I dare not live, thy loving thrall; Dread queen, I quit thy wondrous hall; Boft, dreamy days, time's perfumed fall, Forewell, for aye, farewell! Yon trembling star, that gens the west, Shakes o'er the land where I must rest;

The great gods beekon, their behest Is "onward e'en through hell!" Stay me not, raise, dread queen, thine eyes; rimson floods eve's amber skies! Peart dropped, thy soft-fringed eyelash lies In shade upon thy face. Call me not crue! curse my fale, 'Tis that which leaves thes desolate; The gods are stern; the galleys walt,

Good rowers, take your place!

Oh, loose thy clinging arms! their shouth . Rusts the bold heart- and yet, thy breath Ambrosial southes my neck -oh, death! Dost thou not spare too long? Is life a boon, if I must part From love like Circe's? Faithless heart, Better death's pang than life's long smart! True wife, I do thee wrong!

Yield me my mates, my frolie crew; The palm-leaves cloud with glistening dew; "Tin late! Bright-huired one, uh! too few

The working hours of life! Dear libaca, my rocky home. Remembered more, the more I roam, I hold there een through leagues of form Loved isle, sweet son, true wife! List glittering Circe! wedded love Barns stronger than yon orbs which mave To greet their crescent queen above, Fair stars that blind the day!

By magic wiles made once thins own, Uncharmed, my weakness stands like stone, The gods draw back their Ingering loan, Farewell' my crew, give way! -Once a Weel / Finding a Relic.

A relie strange from my bachelor hoards, You show me with crim-oning face, A little thimble of silver fine -Art these not wondering, bride of mine, Whose finger it used to grace?

Math it a history? Yes, ah! yes, For she who that relie wore. Every pulse of my soul could stir With a look or a louch, while 1, to he Wasa cousin-a boy-no more.

She wedded. And I, a frequent guest,-----Flung on a couch with my books.-With jealous pange I could scarcely hide, Have watched his gestures of love and pride And the an-serenng joy of her looks.

And batter I liked to see her sit you." Sanford, who had been introduced by Mr. I came to the conclusion, as I walked Merton to his mother and sister, a suspicion, One Copyperantum if paidin advance, $150 homeward, that the chief's intimation of which the police papers had first awakened, months from commencement of the year, 200 having previously met me in another sphere that the gentleman in question was an old

> I, of course, related the substance of the been at Doncaster during the races-and cacheubeeneninsertion. 25 Angeridvertisementiin proportion. 25 Atiberalliscount willbe made to quarterly, half explanation of the hint—but whether the otheir business. Atiberalliscount willbe made to quarterly, half explanation of the hint—but whether the otheir business. never afterward alluded to the subject, and her ladyship, which might excite observa-I had not the slightest wish to renew it. tion and suspicion. I should report my pro-Three days clapsed before I received the gress by letter through the post.

"If it should be hel" thought I, as I played by others?" expected summons. On waiting on him, I emerged into the street. The bare supposiwas agreeably startled to find that I was to be at once employed on a mission which the tion had sent the blood whirling through my veins with furious violence. "If this Sanmost sanguine and experienced detective offord be, as I suspect, that villain Cardon, it temptation, be assured." ficers would have felt honored to undertake. "Here is a written description of the perwill indeed be a triumph-victory! Lady sons of this gang of blacklegs, swindlers and Everton need not, in that case, seek to ani-forgers." concluded the Commissioner, summing up his instruction. "It will be your compense. A blighted existence, a young knock, given by Sanford, was promptly object to discover their private haunts, and secure legal evidence of their notorious from opulence to sordid beggary, would catch, was whispered by him through the stimulate the dullest craven that ever crawl. keyhole, as we passed in. practices. We have been hitherto baffied. principally, I think, through the too hasty ed the earth, to energy and action. Pray heaven my suspicions prove correct-and zeal of the officers employed-you must esthen, oh my enemy, look well to yourself, pecially avoid that error. They are pracfor the avenger is at your heels!" ticed scoundrels: and it requires considera-Sanford, I had been instructed, was usu ble practice, as well as acumen to unkennel and bring them to justice. One of their more recent victims is a young Mr. Merton, ballet; the box he generally occupied was quors of all varieties were paraded. There privilege I owed to the moonshine legacy I son by a former marriage, of the Dowager Lady Everton. Her ladyship has applied and I saw by the bills that a very successto us to extricate him from the toils in which ful piece was to be performed that evening, comprised eleven or twelve well-dressed One only hint I had ventured to give Mr. he is meshed. You will call on her at five and determined on being present. I entered the house at 10 o'clock, just afo'clock this afternoon-in plain clothes of course-and obtain whatever information on ter the commencement of the ballet, and I pleasant party might suspect or recognize This was it. the subject she may be able to afford. Remember to communicate directly with me- ment was soon repaid. Five minutes had was scarcely possible. My beat, during the and any assistance you may require shall be not clapsed, when Cardon, looking more in- short period I had been in the force, was

With these, and a few other minor directions, needless to recapitulate, I was dis. young man, whom I had no difficulty from London. Still, questioning glances were missed to a task which, difficult and pos-Lady Everton's drawing-rooms, in deciding one big burly fellow, a foreigner-the rassibly perilous as it might prove; I hailed as to be Merton. a delightful relief from the weary monotony. My course of action was at once deterand dull routine of ordinary duty.

L hastened home, and after dressing with great care-the best part of my wardrobe had been fortunately saved by Emily from the wreck of my fortune-I proceeded to Ludy Everton's mansion. I was immediately marshaled to the drawing-room, where I found her ladyship and her daughter-a beautiful fair looking girl-awaiting my arrival. Lady Everton appeared surprised at confronted him, he could scarcely have ex- ans as those by whom I was surround. Play my appearance, differing, as I dare say it bibited greater surprise. My aspect, nev- was proposed; and though at first stoutly altogether did, from her abstract idea of a ertheless, studiously bland and conciliatory, refused, I feigned to be overcome by irrepoliceman, however attired or disguised and my outstretched hand seemed to invite a renewal of our friendship. and it was not until she had perused the note of which I was the bearer, that her accpting my proffered grasp-"who would haughty and incredulous stare became mitigated to a glance of lofty condescendent have thought of meeting you here?"

"Waters!" he at last stammered, feebly lin, about to swallow you, really." This no

We discussed two or three bottles of wine | ford! you were, with all you cunning, but a with gayety and relish, Sanford, especially sad blind idot to believe the man you had was in exuberant spirits-brimming over | wronged and ruined could so easily forget with brilliant anecdotes and sparkling badi- the debt he owed you!

months romcommencement of the year, 200 having previously met me in another sphere that the gentleman in question was an old with brilliant anecdotes and sparkling badi-d Conts a COPY-Not ubiscription received for a less time than six as I had seldom visited London in my pros-is first. Rates of Advertising to State of Advertising to S over my "excellent intentions and wife- to be handed over. Mr. Merton, elated course, kept to myself-and after emphaticonversation, reminded me that he had once | cally cautioning the ladies to keep our pro | pledged virtue." About half-past 12 he pro- with his repeated triumphs at ecarte, and posed to adjourn, eagerly assented to by prompted by his friend Sanford, resolved ceedings a profound secret from Mr. Merton suggested that he might possibly have seen I took my leave, amply provided with the Mr. Merton, who had for some time exhibi- instead of cancelling the bonds and obligame there. This was a sufficiently probable resources requisite for carrying into effect ted unmistakable symptoms of impatience tions held by the conspiritors, to redeem his losses by staking on that his ready money "You will accompany us Waters?" said against those liabilities. This was at first Sanford, as we rose to depart. "There is, demurred to with much apparent earnest I suppose, no vow registered in the matriness by the winners, but Mr. Merton, warmmonial archives against looking on a game ly seconded by Sanford, insisting upon the concession, as he deemed it, it was finally

"Oh no! but do not ask me to play!" agreed that ecarte should be the game by "Certainly not;" and a devilish sneer which he might hope to regain the fortune curled his lip. "Your virtue shall suffer no and the peace of mind he had so, rashly squandered; the last time should he be suc-We soon arrived before the door of a quiet cessful-and was he not sure of success!-

he assured Sanford, that he would never respectable looking house, in one of the mate my zeal by any promise of money re- streets leading to the Strand; a low poculiar never handle cards or dice. He should have heard the mocking meriment with and gentle wife by his means cast down answered; then a password, which I did not which the gang heard Sanford repeat this very artistipally and effectively done, too .-recovered back his wealth!

We proceeded up stairs to the first floor, The day so eagerly longed for by Merton and his confederates-by the spoilers and the shutters of which were carefully closed. so no intimation of what was going on could their prey-arrived, and I waited with fevpossibly reach the street. The apartment erish anxiety, the coming night. Only the was brilliantly lighted, a roulette table and chief conspirators eight in number, were to designated in the memoranda of the police; were about half a dozen persons present, 1 had just received-was to be admitted to genuine!" soon discovered, beside the gang, and that the crowning triumph of successive fraud. desperadoes, whose sinister aspects induced Merton and that under a promise, "on his honor as a gentleman" of inviolable secrecy. a momentary qualm lest one or more of the "Be sure before commencing play to-morlooked around. The momentary disappoint- my vocation. This, however, I reflected, row night, that the bonds and obligations us flaming with excitement. Mr. Merton you have signed, the jewels you have lost, looked bewilderedly from one to another, solently triumphant than ever, entered arm | far distant from the usual haunts of such with a sum in notes or gold to make up an in arm with a pale aristocratic looking gentry, and I was otherwise unknown in equal amount to that which you make the risk, is actually deposited on the table." his striking resemblance to a portrait in eagerly directed toward my introducer and He promised to insist on this condition. It involved much more than he dreamed of then. cals were the source of various countries-My arrangements were at length throughwas unpleasantly sinquisitorial, "J'en rey complete, and a few minutes past twelve Officers enter and do your duty!" nined upon. Pausing only to master the sponde!" I heard Sanford say, in answer motion which the sight of the glittering to his reiterated queries: and he added o'clock the whispered password admitted me reptile in whose poisonous folds I had been something in a whisper which brought a involved and crushed, inspired, I passed to sardonic smile to the fellow's lips, inducing going on. Mr. Merton was insisting, as I zed by the suddenness of the catastrophe, the opposite side of the house, and boldly a total change in his demeanor towards myenterel the box. Cardon's back was toward self. This was reassuring; for though prohim, for, confident of winning, he was de- armed, and marched off in custody. me, and I tapped him on the shoulder. He vided with pistols, I should, I felt, have litturned quickly round—and if a basilisk had the chance with such utterly teckless ruffitermined to recover his losses to the last farthing; and although his bonds. bills, obligations, his sister's jewels, and a large amount in gold and genuine notes, were produced there was still a heavy sum desistable temptation and sat down to blind ficient. "Ah, by the by," exclaimed Sanhazard with my foreign friend for moderate ford, as I entered, "Wuters can lend you stakes. I was graciously allowed to win, and in the end found myself richer in money by about ten pounds. Mr. Merton was soon "Not you, certainly, since you stare at an absorbed in the chance of dice, and lost

"Be seated, Mr. Waters," said her lady- old friend as if he were some frightfal gob- large sums, for which, when the money he "I never part with my money till I have me. Mr. Merton had his bonds, obligations, brought with him was exhausted, he gave "Hush! let us speak together in the lobby, written acknowledgements. The cheating lost it." An old friend," he added, in answer to Mr. practiced upon him was really audacious, An indignant scowl passed over the scoundrel's features, but he made no reply. Ultiand any one but a tyro must have repeatedly detected it. He, however, appeared not to mately it was decided that one of the fraentertain the slightest suspicion of the "fair | ternity should be despatched in search of Cardon, recovering his wonted sang froid play" of his opponents, guiding himself en-

[WHOLE NUMBER 1,682.

resumed, from the trance of memory by Morally, she is strong, I suspect, only in so which I had been in some sort absorbed, and ciety, and in the common routine of social affairs, and would be found powerloss and timid in any esceptional strait that might first ascertining that my pistols were within casy reach-for I knew I was playing a descall for energy outside of the conventionaliperate game-I'rose, stepped carelessly to the door, partially opened it, and bent forties amid which she has grown up. You can meet this figure in the street, and ward, as if listening for a repetition of the live, and even smile at the recollection. sound which had so alarmed the company. To my great delight the landing and stairs But conceive of her in a ball-room, with were filled with police officers-silent and the bare, brawny arms that she invariably stern as death. I drew back and walked displays there, and all the other corrospond toward the table at which Mr. Merton was ing development, such as is beautiful in, the seated. The last stake-an enormous one- the maiden blossom, but a spectacle to how 1 was being played for .- Merton, lost. He at in such an over-blown cabbage-fuse as sprang upon his feet, deathly pale, despair- this.

ing, overwhelmed, and a hoarse execution Yet, somewhere in this enormous bulk . surged from his clenched teeth. Sanford there must be hidden the modest, glender, nut and his associates cooly raked the plunder violet-nature of a girl, whom an alien mass re's together, their features lighted up with of earthliness has unkindly overgrown; for a an English maiden in her teens, though on

"Villian-traitor-miscrantl"-shrieked very seldom so pretty as our own damsels, ----Mr. Merton, as if smitten with a sudden possesses, to say the truth, a certain charmesta frenzy, and dashing at Sanford's throat; of half-blossom, and delicately-folded leaves, "you devil, that you are, have undone, des- and tender womanhood shielded by maiden : 1. ly reserves, with which, somehow or other as

"No doubt of it," calmly shaking off his our American girls often fail to adorn them - m victim's grasp; "and I think it has been selves during an appreciable moment, with to is a pity that the English violet should grow resolution to amend his ways when he had Sniveling my fine follow, will scarcely help into such an outrageously developed poony as I have attempted to describe. I wonder

Mr. Morton glared upon the taunting whether a middle-aged husband ought torbear considered as legally married taiali the activit "Not quite so fast, Cardon if you please!" cretions that have overgrown, theislander all I exclaimed, at the same time taking up a ness of his bride, since he led her to the alf bundle of forged notes. "It does not appear | tar, and which make, her. so much more & ally present at the Italian opera during the cards were in full activity; wines and li- be present, and no stranger but myself-a to me that Merton has played against equal than he ever bargained for! - Is it not a H stakes, for unquestionably this paper is not sounder view of the case, that the matrimet nial bond cannot be held to include these three-fourths of the wife that had no exis-tence when the ceremony was performed? "Dog!" roared Sanford, "do you value your life so cheap?" and he rushed toward

And as a matter of conscience and good morals, ought not an English married pair I was as quick as he, and the levelled tube of a pistol sharply arrested his cager to insist upon the celebration of a Sifver onslaught. The entire gang gathered near Wedding at the end of twenty-five years, In . order to legalize and mutually appropriate that corporeal growth of which both partike apparently scarcely conscious of what was have individually come into possession since we they were pronounced one flesh? "Wrench the paper from him!" screamed Ling externation

METHUSELEH ONLY & YOUNGSTER. Most poople, have been accustomed to regard Methuseleh as rather an old man, as the gool book says he lived to be fine hundred "Seize "Look to yourself scoundrell" "I shouted with equal vehemence. "Your hour is come! and sixty-nine years old when he died with B it as compared with the people of whom

In an instant the room was filled with pointo the house. Au angry altercation was lice; and surprised, panic stricken, paralyaccounts are given in the sacred writings of India he was only a green-stripling. Mr. had advised, upon the exhibition of a sum the gang were all secured without the slight-Backle, referring to the statements in the equal to that which he had brought with ett resistance, though most of them were Sanorit books on the subject says: 1."The to magination of Hindus distanced all compe-

Three-Sanford, or Cordon (but he had tition. Among an immense number tof half a dozen aliases) one of them---were similar facts, we find it recorded that in !transported for life; the rest were sentenced ancient times the duration of life of common"+ to various terms of imprisonment. My task was effectually accomplished. My men was 80,000 years, and that holy men'w lived to be upwards of 100,000. Some died et superiors were pleased to express very warm a little sooner, others a little later; "but in-a commendation of the manner in which I had the most flourishing period of antiquity; if the sum for an hour or two-for a consider- acquitted myself, and the first step in'the ation," he added in a whisper. "It will promotion which ultimately led to my pres- average. Of the King, whose name was a we take all classes together, 100,000 is the 1# ent position in another branch of public Ynoisobir, it is casually mentioned that he

"No, thank you," I answered very coldly, service, was soon afterward conferred upon reigned 27,000 years; while another, Alarka, reigned 66,000. They were cut off in their prime, since there were several instances of the poets living to be half a million. But, the most remarkable case is that of a very

This eminent man lived in a pure and vir tuous age, and his days were indeed long, in the land, since he was made King when he, was 2,000,000 years out as reigned 4,000, 000 years; having done which he resigned his empire, and lingered on for T00,000 years more, when he died. Who will say, after this, that Methusaleh was apything more than an exceedingly juvenile individual? The Sancrit writings, it will be remembered, are regarded as sacredly by the

- 10 14 · 34

East Indians as the Bible is by our people, it

HUNNING-Binds .- A writer on the sub-12

ject says .- "It is a most purpacious bird.

Many a time have I thought to secure a fine "

from tree to tree, and at last seen quietly was 2,000,000 years old; he reigned 6.300.

shining character in Indian history, who

Her mien more pensive, her check more pale, Busied with work that was telling a tale Of new-know pleasures and care.

Or work forgomen-her dark eyes closed-Her fancy with sweet dreams rife Of a tiny form by her arm carcesed, A baby face to her bosom pressed-The mother, as well as the wife.

Twas thus I saw them-mother and baba-But shrouded with flow tets fair; Unconcious both as they calmly slept. Of the bitter tear a that he and I wentof the long long vigils, we sadly kept-

Kept in our love ad despair. From the work her fingers would touch no more I took that relie alone: But your cheek is wet, and your lip is pale-I should not have told this sorrowful tale-

Go, hide the relie, my own.

Selections.

One Night in a Gaming House.

BY AN EX-POLICE OFFICER.

months which had elapsed, had very liter-A little more than a year after the period when adverse circumstances-chiefly the re- ally fallen "among thieves." A passion for sult of my reckless follies-compelled me gambling seemed to have possession of his again." to enter the ranks of the Metropolitan Police, being; and almost every day, as well as as the sole means left me of procuring food night of his haggard, feverish life, was and raiment, the attention of one of the prin- spent at play. A run of ill-luck, according cipal chiefs of the force was attracted toward to his own belief-but in very truth of downme by the ingenuity and boldness, which I right robbery-had set in against him, and was supposed to have manifested in hitting he had, not only dissipated all the ready upon and unraveling a clue, which ultimate- money which he had inherited and the large ly led to the detection and punishment of sums which the foolish indulgence of his the perpetrators of an artistically contrived mother had supplied him with, but had in- very confidential tone, "my name, for family this vice plunge men otherwise honorablefraad upon an eminent tradesman of the volved himself in bonds, bill and other obli- and other reasons, which I will hereafter had been staked and lost, and he was, "by West end of London. The chief sent for gations, to a frightful amount. The princi- explain to you, is for the present Sanford." me-and after a somewhat lengthened con- pal agent in effecting this ruin was one Sanwhrestion, not only expressed admiration of ford-a man of dashing exterior, and the erential acquiescence.

The distribution of the state of the stat lip, waving forms me that you have been selected for the duty of extricating my son from the peril-Merton's surprised stare, "we will return ous entanglements in which he has unhapin an instant." pily involved himself."

promptly rendered."

civility.

"Well, what is all this, Waters?" said I was about to reply-for I was silly enough to be somewhat nettled at the noble lady's haughtiness of manner-that I was the instant we were alone. "I understood tirely by the advice of his friend and counfact-what shall I say?" a gang of swindlers with whom her son had "Ruined-done up! Nobody should know involved himself, and was there to procure that better than you.". from her ladyship any information she "My good fellow you do not imagine--' might be possessed of likely to forward so "I imagine nothing, my dear Cardon. I desirable a, result, but, fortunately, the remembrance of my actual position, spite of is written in the vulgar tongae. But fortumy gentleman's attire, flashed vividly upon nately my kind old uncle"my mind; and instead of permitting my "Passgrove is dead!" interrupted my old glib tongue to wag irreverently in the presacquaintance, eagerly jumping to a concluence of a right honorable, I bowed with defsion, "and you are his heir. I congratulate

Her ladyship proceeded, and I, in sub- you, my dear fellow. This indeed is a charming reverse of circumstances." stance, received the following information: "Yes; but mind, I have given up the old Mr. Charles Merton, during the few have promised Emily never to touch a card > was little elso-gleamed mockingly as these | which Mr. Merton had been pillaged. "good intentions" of a practical gamester fell upon his ear-but he replied, "very good, quite right, my dear boy. But come, let me introduce you to Mr. Merton, highly "Sanford!"

"Yes: do not forget. But allons, or the an hour and returned with a bundle of notes. engaged in the public service of extirpating you had retired from among us; were in sellor, who did not himself play. The ami- They were, as I hoped and expected, forge ble assemblage broke up about six in the eries on foreign banks. Mr. Merton looked morning, each person retiring singly, by at and counted them over, and then the play the back way, receiving as be departed, a commenced.

better interpret than he. It ceased.

Sanford

ed for the reply.

new password for the next evening. A few hours afterward I waited on the was very thoroughly done-done brown, as Commissioner to report the state of affairs. He was delighted with the fortunate debut I had made, but still strictly enjoined patience and caution. It would have been easy, as I was in possession of the password. to have surprised the confederacy in gaming that very evening; but this would only have accomplished a part of the object aimed at. Several of the fraternity-Sanford among game. No more dice-deviltry for me. I the number-was suspected of uttering mad-man. forged foreign notes, and it was essential to watch narrowly for legal evidence to restore, The cold eye of the incarnate fiend-he if possible, the property and securities of noise, below?"

Nothing of especial importance occurred for seven or eight days. Gaming went on as usual every evening, and Mr. Merton beeame, of course more and more involved; connected personage, I assure you. By the even his sister's jewels-which he surreptiway, Waters," he added, in a caressing and tiously obtained, to such a degradation will the advice of Sauford, about to conclude a once-twice-thrice. "All right!" shouted heavy mortgage on his estate, in order not only to be clear of his enormous "debt of Sanford, "Proceed! The farce is nearly jewels, and money restored to him; and, taught wisdom by terrible experience, never again entered a gaming house.

Neither he nor his lady mother were ungrateful for this service I had been fortun- united the functions of a King and a Saint the required sum. He was gone about half ate enough to render them.

fiondish glee.

troyed me!"

you much."

villian in speechless agony and rage.

me as if to seize the forged notes.

Sanford, recovering his energy.

him-stab him, strangle him!"

passing around him.

English Women. BY NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

I have heard a good deal of the tenacity As it went on, so vividly did the scene rewith which English ladies retain their percall the evening that had sealed my own sonal beauty to a late period of life; but (not ruin, that I grew dizzy with excitement, and to suggest that an American eye needs use drained tumbler after tumbler of water to and cultivation before it can quite appreciallay the fevered throbbing of my veins .--ate the charm of English beauty at any age) The gamblers were certainly too much abit strikes me that an English lady of fifty sorbed to heed my agitation. Merton lost is apt to become a creature less refined and continuously-without nause or intermission. delicate, so far as her physique goes, than The stakes were doubled, trebled quadrupanything that we Western people class unled! His brain was on fire: and he played. dar the name of woman. She has an awful or rather lost, with the recklessness of a male, which I had, perhaps, been following ponderosity of frame, not pulpy, like the looser development of our few fat women, "Hark! what's that?" suddenly exclaimed perched on a leafless twig, when my doadly but massive with solid beef and streaky tal-Sanford from whose Satanic features the low; so that (though struggling manfully mask he had so long worn before Merton had been gradually slipping. "Did you hear a as made up of steaks and sirloins. When she walks, her advance is elephantine. My ear had caught the sound, and I could When she sits down, it is on a great round "Touch the signal bell, A dolphe," added looks as if nothing could ever move her. She imposes awe and respect by the muchness Not only the play, but the very breathing of the villians was suspended as they listen-It came. The answering tinkle sounded intention hay been anticipated by one less against the idea) you inevitably think of her so in fact, but, to all appearances, equally so in will. Another humming-bird rushes in, knocks the one I court off his perch, and the two go fighting and screaming away at space of her Maker's footstool, where she a pace hardly to be followed by the bye."" Another time this flying fight is sustained in mid-air, the Delligerents "mounting" of her personality, to such a degree that you bigher and higher, till the one worsted in probably credit her with far 'greater moral battle darts away seeking shelter,' followed and intellectual force than she can fairly by the victor, who never relinquishes the claim. Her visage is usually gim and pursuit till the vanquished, by doublidg and stern, not always positively forbidding jet hiding, succeeds in making his escape calmly terrible, not merely by its breadth These fierce raids are not waged along be-