AMERICAN PATRIOTISM.

True patriotism on the part of every tyranny bound ber down; and in throwing off her shackles, did, with solemn vows, before the Omnipotent Ruler of the Uniby the laws laid down for us in the constitution—that law which was enacted on the ever memorable fourth of July, 1776, and which was so heroically defended when the cloud of tyranny or the hand of treason ever dared to presume its destruction. Let-party strife be cast aside, so that we may, with a united effort, crush out the cringing desires of these southern oligarchs, and, with open arms, welcome back the repentant enemy of his country to the true fold of the constituted authority. We desire no doubtful measures: of Christ guiding us to the throne of grace; and wish but one country, with the constitution as a beacon light to direct us safely through the gale of treason which is baffling with us, and guide us into the looked for port of peace, with a hopeful assurance that the thorn of anguish shall never again pierce our nation's heart.

never been better portrayed than by So-lon, one of the seven wise men of Greece, when he was speaking of the happiness wishing to win the good graces of Solon, had everything apportaining to the royal court in readiness to receive him. The king, with a numerous court, appeared in all his regal pomp and splendor, dressed in the most-magnificent apparel, which was enriched with gold and glittered with costly diamonds ... but all these did not appear to create the least surprise or admiration on the part of Solon. The king afterwards ordered all his treasures, his accut apartments, and costly furnime, to be shown him; as if he expected by the multitude of his fine vessels, jewels, statues, and paintings, to conquer the philosopher's indifference : but all of no avail, for with all these, Solon saw that the king was not happy. Crossus then asked him, "which of all mankind in all his travels he had found the most truly happy?" "One Tellus," replied Solon, "a citizen of Athens, a very honest and good man, who, after having lived all his days whithout indigence, having always seen his country in a flourishing condition, has left children that are universally esteemed, has had the satisfaction of seeing those children's children, and at last died cloriously in fighting for his country." Such an enswer as this, in which gold and silver were nothing in comparison to the patriotism of Tellus, should be sufficient to teach all that love of national life, which is paramount to everything most dear to us in this our earthly pilgrimage. The government is preparing to make a last crowning effort to wipe out the foul stain of treason which is holding in check the onward progress of American greatness. This season, with Grant as our leader, will find our armies assaulting the remaining strongholds of the traitors in arms: and it now lies with you, fellowcitizens, to render the proper assistance which you are justly called on to peform by the authorities at Washington. Do not let yourself be disgraced by the necessity of a draft, but by willing endeavors and a little exertion our quota may vet be filled by volunteers. Then arouse, shake off this lumbersome drowsiness which holds you in check, and all may yet be well. ate to the said

It is from the closing portion of sh article in which he speaks of "confederate military honor," and exposes the treacherous conduct of the rebels towards the dead and wounded federal soldiers : "Had we our wish, we would throw hell wide open, and place all such beast like officers and men upon an inclined plane, at an angle of forty-five degrees, rease the plane with hog's lard six inches thick, with a wicket at the bottom, and send them, as one stream of traitors robbers and assessins, into the hottes part of the infernal regions."

The Rebels, as we learned afterward from some of those who were captured, suspected that the Ninth Corps was in Fort Sausders, and refused to attack them. They were only induced to do so by lying speeches of their officers, in which they declared the fort was manned by raw recruits. When they had discovered by their minous trial that they were deceived. their curses, of course, were infinite, and they protested with bitterness that they never would have attacked the fort, knowing it to be manned by the men they found there. . Malignant Typhoid or Spotted Fever.

This disease known by the above name. has within the last year visited different places in this and other States, including Chester county. In many cases it has run its career with startling suddenness." The cases which have occurred in West Chester, as far as known, were generated by local causes. The medical faculty have given their diligent attention to the study of the disease. The following sketch was furnished us by W. D. Hartman, M. D., of this Borough :

The disease which startled our community, is one that has prevailed in other places during the last few years, and has assumed an epidemic form in several localities at the present time. It is known to physicians by the name of "Typho Malarial Fever," and "Epidemic Spinal Meningitis." It is probably Malarial in its origin. The cases occurring in this locality, are undoubtedly of this character.

The disease is ushered in by a chill of severity. .. The pulses is very frequent, ceble and thread like, and the surface is pale and shrunken. As the disease advances, the patient becomes dull and attaid, the pupils dilate, and where reaction does not occur, they often die in comotose state in a few hours.

In other cases where the outset of the disease if not, so violent the patient is the head, back and limbs; the kead ofmuscles of the neck and back. Deafness is also a prominent symptom. Usually in a few hours, numerous dark purple spots, termed Potschiss or Vibioes appear on the face, peck and arms, gradually spreading more or less over the body.
