Resens of a Gallant Officer.

Major William B. Darlington, 18th Pennsylvania eavalry, has arrived at his home in Chester county, Pennsylvania His ease is rare and in eresting. On the 5th day of May, during a severe cavalry fight with Hampton's division, (rebel; when our forces, at the portion of the line of battle held by General Wilson. Major Darlington's regiment were order ed to retain their position, and keep the enemy in check for forty-five minutes after the remainder of the force opposing Hampton had been ordered to fall back. five minutes, and then, attempting to re tire, found themselve; hemmed in in the direction of their intended retreat by another entire brigade of rebel cavalry commanded by Rosser. They proceeded to cut their way through, and, after r ament succeeded in accomplishing their purpose.

In the first charge Major Darlington received a wound which shattered his right leg. Although the subsequent charges by both parties were made directly over his body, as he lay upon the field, the Major received no other injury. He laid on the battle-field three his leg amputated at the hip by Hamp- the moment. ton's chief surgern. The amputation was well p rformel, and he received as good treatment as the limited resources of the rebels would permit at the hands of the surgeon, Dr. Taylor, of South Carolina, and of General Hampton. He was conveyed to a farm house in Spottaylvania county, about three miles from the area of the engagement in which he received his wound, and there remained three weeks. During General Sheridan's rud he was found, placed in an ambulanes, and coveyed with the column for -will be reached Wart Point which place he left on Monday. While with General Sheridan's command every practicable attention was given him by the General and officers, and every effort made to secure suitable food and other comforts to recruit his strength. He had been officially reported as killed, and, until despatches were telegraphed to his friends, they had no other news of his fate.

Can't Understand It.

A war-beaten veteran of Longstreet's corps, made a funny remark to a friend of mine, a prominent politician, who conthe front. Said he "I do not understand all this; Lee has won a big victory over they left the car. Ladies should be care-Grant on the Rapidan, and told us so, ful how they full asleep on the wrong vest and that night we retreated. Then he pattern. won another in the Wilderness, and told us so, and we retreated to Spottsylvania. Then he won another tre-men-jus victory, and I got tuk prisoner; but I reckon be to lick them, the Yanks fell back and he refuses tu do it. claimed a victory, and we understood it. Now Lee claims victories and keeps a fallin' back, and I can't understand it."

The Long and Lingering Farewell. The soldier threw his arms around the lady and gave her a soldier's kiss.

I listened for the report; but the lips refused to part. Seconds appeared hours. The eye would turn from the scene and then back again, expecting to find the stood clinging like drowning ones, mutt- tail hold. ally drinking their cup of silence in bit-

Their arms relaxed, their lips separated, but still they stood; she looking into his large brown eyes, and he in turn would fathom her soul through its tearfal windows.

They heeded not the crowd around them. They were emphatically alone. Again the strong arm pressed her to his rwelling heart, and then another of those long, long, soldier kisses which stop only to get a deeper inspiration.

The car bell summoned him to the train and the battle-field, and her to a widow's home.

The Chicago ladies a few days ago attired themselves in their nicest silks. wrapped their most expensive showls around them, adorned themselves with their gaudiest ribbous and richest laces, and held a meeting to talk over the economical covenant movement.

In one of the Hospitals lately, when they fell off. the inmates learned of the re-nomination of Lincoln, a wounded soldier held up a limb amputated at the knee and averred with a chuckle indicating his own appreviation of his joke :- "I will stump Ohio for Old Abe."

Railroad Romance.

The traveler who has been so very forunate as to sit beside an unkaowa beauty in a railroad carriage, and had his conher spirit of sociability, can comprehend car adventure we are about to relate.

This worthy gentleman was a passenger on the Central Railroad on Monday hist, and happened to be in a car that was pretty we'l stocked with humanity. He had managed to act that was are generally kept in a first class Jewelry Store. had managed to retain a seat from the commencement of the journey, until the train reached a stopping-place, where a fresh supply of passengers entered it, when he gallantly surrendered it to an old lady, and made up his mind to stand old lady, and made up his mind to stand of the store.

Now it happened that a young and tylish-looking lady noticed the act, and so pleased was she to see an old woman treated politely, that she at once removed her carpet bag from the end of the seat he occupied, and invited the gentleman to take its place. Nothing loth, our hero accepted the modest invitation, and was soon engaged in a friendly conversation with the belle of the train. They chatted in lively style until the "shades of night were falling fast," when the lady's utter-They obeyed the order with a grace of ance grew slower, then indistinct, and then altogether ceased, for she was asleep.

Not being disposed to follow her example, the gentleman amused himself by watching his fellow-passengers, and was reminded of his companion's presence by her head touching his shoulder. Morseveral charges and counter charges, the pheus had her completely in his folds, and by a series of graceful nods, she unconsciously sought the support of her railroad acquaintance.

The bachelor was delighted at the first gentle touch, but his pleasure, when, in the abandonment of sleep, her form nestled down until its whole weight bore down entirely upon him, baffles description .-The better to support his lovely burden, days, and was then picked up by the he placee his arm around her waist, and rebels, taken to Hampton's quarters, and then gave himself up to the delirum of

After passing the next station, a gentleman entered the ear containing the persous above referred to, and commenced examining the face of each occupant, as though he was in search of some friend. In the darkness of the hour, he passed the sleeper and her supporter without noticing them, and it was only when he turned to retrace his steps that the scene attracted his attention. In a moment the shade of auxiety on his features was succeeded by a frown, and he stepped quickly to the side of the fair sleeper.

As his hand descended heavily upon her shoulder, she started, opened her eyes, sprang to her feet, "blushing celes" ial rosy red." Before the bachelor could speak, the new-comer politely informed him that he could take care of his own wife, if he had no objections, and straightway led the lady to another seat. The explanation that ensued unfolded the fact that the lady had been absent on a visit for some time, and was then returning to the faithful husband, whose impatience led him to meet her half-way. Eager to meet her, he had entered the car only to find her in the arms of a stranger! Of course the stranger told how versed with him while coming in from it happened; but the frown did not pass away from the brow of the husband until
