Augels. BY EVA ALICE. O mother, why mourn for thy darling, For the spirit that's taken its flight?

It has gone from this valley of shadows, realms of estatic delight. Thy care was the care of a parent

A mother the fondest and best; But God, in His Infinite widsom, Took thy babe to its Heavenly rest. Angels bore it away to His bosom. Who said, "let them come unto Me;" Christ engrafts all such little blossoms, To bloom on The Beautiful Tree.

Attended by ministering spirits, Bright Angels of glittering wing Who attune th' sweet harps of God's children

Then mourn thee no longer, dear mother, Dost thou doubt in Heaven's kind care ?-Trust to "Christ and th' love of the angels," Thou know'st that thy darling is there.
