"NO ENTERTAINMENT SO CHEAP ASJREADING, NOR ANY PLEASURE SO LASTING."

Boetry.

BY WILLIE WARE.

When the gentle perfume
Of the spring's first flowers,
Are wafted by the zephyrs
From the garden bowers,
To my attic chamber,

Where I sit and weep,

Then I long to die

My cheerless, loansome room

Amid the shadowy gloom,

In death to sweetly sleep.

When gay and happy voices-

Where maids and lovers meet

Neath the stars bright beam.

From earth and care to fly

When far above—beyond—
Appears the wished for goal,

When all around me wear Looks of gloomy sadness,

Of joy and fairy gladness-city of the highest respectability and afcissitudes of dame fortune became separated from her husband during the early days of the Confederacy. For years she heard nothing of him, and at last the melanchuly conclusion was accepted that he was dead. In the meantime she became reduced in circumstances, and at the time when the Federal troops occupied the city she was compelled to dispose of her costly and elegant furniture. This she did, piece by piece, until the last object which served to bind her to her former independence had been sold; and she began to dispair. Only a few days ago she received a letter from a gentleman residing in Mississippi, in which she was informed that her husband had dollars accompanied the letter for her loved her."
