

THE COLUMBIA SPY.

INDEPENDENT, FEARLESS & FREE.

COLUMBIA, PA. Saturday, Jan. 20, 1866.

Advertising notice: All advertising will be considered CASE and published as any time after the first insertion.

THE EDITORIAL TREADMILL.—The Home Journal thus describes the editors' burdens: "It is one of the hardships of our profession that its working-wheels—brains and heart—are not allowed to lag for sickness, or to stop for calamity or sorrow. The judge may adjourn his court, the school and the workshop may close shutters, the mourner may veil his features, and turn friend and stranger from the door; but the journalist must forget before to-morrow the sorrows of to-day, must write gaily and freshly as a news-monger on the trifle of the hour, whatever burden has been laid upon that same hour by Providence, or his brains as a man. It sometimes tries and mocks as the world that reads what is thus written would never dream of. The public looks upon the editor's labors as the Indian did upon the man that was cutting hay. He finally gave as his opinion that it was 'easy to see the white man now.'"

Mr. Brown Stout.

The following will be immensely interesting to drinkers of English beer: "A celebrated brewer in London had, in his employ, a fat porter by the name of Stout. One day Stout was missing, and they knew nothing of him for several weeks. In the meantime, his London customers plied him with orders for more beer like the last supplied. The brewer was at a loss to know in what consisted the superiority of that particular brewing until the beer was all drawn from the vat, when, to their astonishment and horror, they found the remains of poor Stout. He had fallen into the vat of hot beer, and been scalded to death. The citizens of London had drunk him up, with the exception of the parts not soluble in water; nothing was left of him but his hair, toe and finger nails, and the bones. This circumstance gave the name to that particular kind of liquor, known as Brown Stout, which has established for itself a world-wide celebrity, and is sold in all parts of the civilized world at fabulous prices."

ATTENTION, SOLDIERS OF OUR LATE ARMY.—Many Discharged Soldiers have claims of which they have no knowledge. By sending for a Circular to L. Brown & Co., of No. 2 Park Place, N. Y., information will be furnished which may be valuable. Oct 21 1/2 20 66
