Elopement in High Life. Last evening, upon the arrival of the the only additional expense will be the Chicago train, a private carriage took to the Walker House a young lady and a young gentleman who appeared very much excited and yery much in a hurry. Upon showing the lady into the parlor the gentleman called Mr. Carver, the COLUMBIA DRUGGIST COLUMN chief clerk, and defined his position. He was the proprietor of a runaway match. He loved the lady and the lady loved him -they loved each other, and had sworn to love nobody else. As they always will, the young lady portion of the expedition had a mother who had serious and continued and stubborn objections to her daughter marrying just at this time, unless she married the person of the lady's choice, while the loving daughter had DRUGS, MEDICINES, CHEMICALS determined to marry the object of her own selection. Consequently, as they had determined to be separated no longer they had embraced the first opportunity to fly and here they were, only awaiting the coming of the parson to make them happy. A parlor was tendered for the use of the persistent couple, a clergyman was sent for and in very short order they were made one flesh and blood, in the presence of a number of the guests of the house-ladies and gentlemen. This morning they returned to Chicago to beg mamnia's pardon, and promise if forgiven pot to do so again. The gentleman is a well known conductor on a Chicago railroad and bears an excellent reputation, while the lady is the only child and prospective heir of one of the wheat elevator kings of the same city, who had no objection to the new son-in-law only as far as his wife was concerned.
