It was burned during the invasion, on the 28th of June, 1863, by orders of Maj-Gen. Couch.—There is nothing left but the piers, and they, with the right of way, were pur-chased by the Penneylvania Railroad Company.— Much to the regret of the cilzens of this place, no effort has been made as yet, to re-build it. It way a covered bridge, one mile and a quarter long, and was the best specimen of the Burr bridge in the United States. Its loss is a great draw back to this community. We have an elegant steam.coat, which plies back and forth, between this place and Wrights-ville.
