Rock me to Sleep. Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight; Make me a child again just for to-night! Mother, come back from the echoless shore, Take me again to your heart as of yore; Kiss from my forehead the furrows of care, Smoothe the few silver threads out of my hair; Over my slumbers your loving watch keep— Rock me to sleep, Mother—rock me to sleep.

Backward, flow backward, O tide of the years! I am so weary of toil and of tears— I am so weary of toil and of tears—
Toil without recompense—tears all in vain—
Take them, and give me my childhood again!
I have grown weary of dust and decay—
Weary of flinging my soul wealth away;
Weary of sowing for others to reap—
Rock me to sleep, Mother—Rock me sleep.

Tired of the hollow, the base, the untrue, Mother, O mother, my heart calls for you! Many a summer the grass has grown green, Blossomed and faded our faces between; Yet, with strong yearning and passionate pain, Long I to-aight for your presence again, Come from the silence so long and so deep; Rock me to sleep' mother—rock me to sleep.

Over my heart, in the days that are flown; No love like mother love ever has shone; No other worship abides and and endures; Faithful, unselfsh, and patient like yours, None like a mother can charm away pain From the sick soul and the world-weary brain. Slumber's soft calms o'er my heavy lids creep, Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep. Come, let your brown hair just lighted with gold, Fall on your shoulders again as of old:
Let it drop over my forehead to-night, Shading my faint eyes away from the light; For with its sunny edged shadows once more Haply will throng the sweet visions of yore; Lovingly, softly, its bright billows sweep; Rock me to sleep, mother—rock me to sleep.

Mother, dear mother, the years have been long Since I last listened to your Iuliaby song; Sing, then, and unto my soul it shall seem Womanhood's years have been only a dream. Clasped to your heart in a loving embrace, With your light lashes just sweeping my face, Never hereafter to wake or to weep—Rock me to sleep! [FLORENCE PERCY.

A Frightful Ride A Locomotive in charge of a Lunatic. A correspondent of the Chicago Times relates the following incident, which oc curred at Centralia, Illinois:

"At four o'clock this morning a yard master in the employ of the Ilinois Central railroad at this place, saw a man on an engine that had steam up standing and his former Chief of Staff, General on the track ready to go out. The yard master accosted him and told him to get of the town." off the engine. The man replied by knocking down the yard-master, and starting Northward at a terrific rate of lying asleep on the engine when it started. They awoke to find themselves wind and a stranger at the engine. "On examination they found him to be a drunken stone mason of this place, named Fitzpatrick, who had been raving with delirium tremens recently The stop, but he heeded not, and drove the engine faster and faster. He sounded the whistle at Central City, the first VEGETABLE SICILIAN station north, but did not far a moment Central City, the whistle shrieked again and the engine sped like a cannon ball toward Sandoval. The situation was now becoming tearfully perlious, when the brakeman seized a piece of coal and hurled it at the desperate maniae. He then left the engine and turned upon the brakeman and fireman. One of them struck him with a sledge-hammer, and after a struggle he was secured. The engine was speedily reversed and brought back to this city."

A Dog Sold.

A gentleman in New Haven, Conn., afterwards the "little dogs and all," on Towser from the country was following his master's wagon into town, and hapeniron foe. A preliminary growl and bowwow produced no effect. Surly and defiant his enemy continued to gaze on him. Canine nature could stand it no longer. One leap over the fence brought him into the yard, and two or three more carried him to his mute antagonist. Quicker than thought he attempted to fasten his tee:h on the cast-iron chops of the statue but the next moment gave up the contest. The last that was seen of that dog he was sneaking ont of the yard with his tail between his legs, the most completely sold specimen of canine society ever

A letter from Lexington, Va., has the following respecting Robert E. Lee:-'General Lee lives a peaceful, cheerful, unobtrusive life among these mountains. Lee holds himself utterly aloof from the disputes and passions of the hour; and here is a proof: On Saturday night he was at Rockbridge Baths. Stalwart and erect as ever, white-haired and ruddyhued; his eye still bright and kindly, as of old, he sat among the ladies of the neighborhood, chatting as any other man might do; but with him, with his past and present hanging about him, it seemed like the dead past holding converse with the muses. Presently there was the confusion of the nightly arrival from Richmond, and one gentleman being acquainted with the General, greeted him and after the common-places, tendered him the newspapers of the day. 'Thank you' said Lee, 'but I never read any of them.' Lee lives here comfortably and calmly, with his family and many of his former friends around. His son, Custis Lee, is a Professor in the Institute here, Pendleton, is the Episcopal clergyman Influence of Marriage on Morals. Voltaire said: "The more married men speed. A brakeman and fireman were you have, the fewer crimes there will be. Marriage renders a man more virtuous and more wise. An unmarried man is flying away with all the speed of the but half of a perfect being, and it requires the other half to make things right; and it can not be expected that in this imperfect state he can keep the straight path of rectitude any more than a boat with one oar, or a bird with one two men were at first appalled with wing, can keep a straight course. Here is a home for the entire man, and the counsel, the example, and the interest of his "better half," keep him from erratic courses, and from falling into a thousand temptations to which he would be exposed. Therefore the friend of marriage is the friend to society and to his country."
