BARBARA FRIETCHIE.
PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.

Up from the meadows rich with corn,
Clear in the cool September morn;
The cloud-vested spires of Frederick stand
Green-walled by the hills of Maryland.

Round about them orchards sweep,
Apple and peach-tree fruited deep,
Fair as a garden of the Lord
To the eyes of the furnished rebel horde,

On that pleasant morn of early fall,
When Lee marched over the mountain wall;
Over the mountains winding down,
Horse and foot, into Frederick town.

Forty flags with their silver stars,
Forty flags with their crimson bars,
Flapped in the morning wind: the sun
Of noon looked down and saw not one.

Up rose old Barbara Frietchie then,
Bowed with her fourscore years and ten;
Bravest of all in Frederick town,
She took up the flag the men hauled down:

In her attic-window the staff she set,
To show that one heart was loyal yet.

Up the street came the rebel tread,
Stonewall Jackson riding head,
Under his slouched hat left and right
He glanced; the old flag met his sight.

"Fire!"—the dust-brown ranks stood fast.
"Fire!"—out blazed the rifle-blast.

It shivered the window, pane and sash;
It rent the banner with seam and gash.

Miscellaneous.

Henry Ward Beecher on Labor.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, in a sermon to young men, thus speaks:

"I always honor a man who embosoms his calling, whatever it may be. Franklin made it nobler and easier for men to be printers in all time to come because he remained a printer. I presume you have all heard of the Douse Library. It with a fine collection of paintings, was once the property of an old tanner, who was determined that his friends and neighbors should know that he could be a man of taste, a scholar, a man of culture, a tanner that he was. So he collected his books a few at a time, and what is more to the point, he read them. And being a tanner, he had naturally a taste in the line of leather, so he waited patiently until he could have them all bound as he wished. And as he grew older he became very wealthy, and had, before he died, the best library of any one in that section of the country. When I go to Boston, whatever else I fail to see, I always go to the Athenaeum and pay my respects to that old library. Men determine their own status, and no voting or influence can change them. If you put a man who is but five feet high on a table, you don't increase his stature; you may send a man to Albany—that won't make him wiser; you may send him to Washington—that won't make him a great man. A man may be sent to Congress and not be a sage. He may even be a President and make some mistakes. This rule of education, of ennobling the manhood of men is applicable as well to clerks as to the laboring man. Importance may secure to them a remission of time, or a slight increase of wages, but the vital necessities of these young men, the volume of being and the elevation of character, are secured in no such way; they are the normal result of education, and follow appointed paths. In aristocratic societies the tendency of society is to elevate the few and depress the masses, but in this country, and wherever true democracy has its way, the tendency is to elevate the many and repress the few. It may be true that the tens are more scarce than in earlier days, but it certainly is true that the thousands are more plenty. There are not so many geniuses and great men, but there are vastly more than ever before. Here we are jealous of the few, and prominence is not so readily granted to the ambitious as where the average of society is low. The ten-

Quick, as it fell, from the broken staff,
Dance Barbara snatched the silken scarf;
She leaned far out on the window-sill,
And shook it forth with a royal will.

"Shoot, if you must, this old gray head,
But spare my country's flag," she said.
A shade of sadness, a blush of shame,
Over the face of the leader came;

The noble nature within him stirred,
To life at that woman's deed and word:

"Who touches a hair of you gray head,
Dies like a dog!" March on!" he said.

All day long through Frederick street
Sounded the tread of marching feet:

All day long that free flag tost
Over the heads of the rebel host.

Ever its torn folds rose and fell
On the loyal winds that loved it well;

And through the bill-gaps sunset light
Shone over it with a warm good-night.

Barbara Frietchie's work is o'er,
And the Rebel rides on his ruder no more.

Honor to her! and let a tear
Fall for her sake, on Stonewall's bier.

Over Barbara Frietchie's grave,
Flag of Freedom and Union, wave!

Peace and order and beauty draw
Round thy symbol of light and law;

And over the stars above look down
On thy stars below in Frederick town!

denies of our time are far higher and better than formerly. The natural temptations remain, to be
