Mrs. Sweeny had been a strong and musculine woman, but for twenty years past had grown remarkably large and fat, and, recently, almost helpless from her size and weight, which was not less than four hundred pounds; and this, with in-flammatory rheumatism, made it difficult for ner to stoop or to walk for many stops. She suffered greatly, no doubt, from in-ternal rain; and from her huge size and weight, she was compeled to take her rest in a large chair, not being able to rise from her bed if she should lie down to sleep— while her really devoted husband, though becoming himself more feeble from his age and from Asthma, refused himself to take his rest in bed, and thus shortened, pro-bably, his own life in watching hers, faith-fully to the last. He survived her long enough to know that she had ceased to suffer, and to say that he was glad she was relieved from pain. Mrs. Sweeny was an object of interest, if not of curiosity to many friends, and par-ticularly to her few visitors—the ntighbor-ing children, whom, with course voice, but pleasant words, she flattered with praises, and made happy with little presents—the boys with a hand al of dried cherries, and some of the bright flowers of her borders, -Marigolds or Lady-slippers,—to the little girls.
