General Baker's Book. The history of the Secret Service, by General L. C. Baker, contains some startling disclosures. The facts brought out show up some of the private affairs in and about the White House, which does not speak very well for the morals of the President or Mrs. Cobb. It shows, too, that the work of treason was more unmerciful, relentless and atrocious, than was ever dreamed of by those who were not called on face to face to contend with its armed upholders. The Harrisburg Telegraph says: The worst elements of the slaveholders' rebellion were those which operated in secret and darkness. The fiends encouraged by Jeff Davis to burn Northern hotels, send infected clothing to Northern ports, pillage defenseless Northern villages, could only be traced in their operations by those engaged in the secret service of the National Government; and by Gen. Baker's disclosures we are now only informed of the recklessness with which rebels violated every instinct of humanity, and trampled upon every law of honor, in order to succeed in their hellish work to destroy the Government. It is singular that the worst history of the rehellion should be laid before the people of

The Wheat Crop. The New York Times says that it seems to be a hard struggle with those who are interested in keeping the price of bread-stuffs up to the figure of the past eighteen months, to give practical effect to their views. They have given the utmost prominence to reports of exceptional shipments of flour and wheat from San Francisco to Atlantic ports. They have made the most of the re-shipment of one or more cargoes of American grain from Liverpool to this side. They have counted largely on the severity of the winter which is past, and on the backwardness of the spring which is present. They have had their touters abroad in nearly every grain-growing district from the Genessee Valley to Central Virginia, all inspired with the same spirit of soothsaying, and all more or less prepared to vance opinions foretokening a failure for the year in our great staple. But the special correspondents of the Herald throughout the country, as well as our exchanges, furnish us with the gratifying intelligence that the growing crops give promise of an abundant yield. It is yet too early to speculate upon the prospects as crops of all descriptions are yet sus ceptible of serious injury; but we are in formed that large additions have been made in all sections to the number of acres sown, and that the growing grain had never a more satisfactory appearance.

THE Danville Times, published at Dan ville, Va., in a recent issue, blows off a little surplus gas, in reference to Hunnicutt, editor of the Richmond New Nation, making a speech to the inhabitants of Danville. It

"If Hunnicut comes to Danville to stir up strife between the white and black people of Danville, who are getting on smoothly together: now, we appeal to the military as our protectors, to pre-vent his speaking."

The military they would appeal to, we imagine, would be of their own "disorganized stripe," and of course a speech on justice and equal rights, or anything of a peaceful and truthful nature, would greatly enrage them; somebody might then get hurt. Don't go Hunnicutt, or they might give you a "Kelley reception."

THE Southern papers, and especially those of Richmond, are exceedingly jubilant and thankful over the release of Jefferson Davis. The Times of that city says, "Thank God, the prison doors have at last been thrown open, and no Confederate soldier or statesman now atones, by individual sufferings, for the act of a great people." The Richmond Whig is also delighted, and cannot withhold an expression of admiration for Judge Underwood. It says that "in this moment of supreme pleasure, we are not willing to withhold from him the compliment he deserves." But the old Inquirer, the organ of the old State Rights' Democracy, a paper which was all powerful, not only in Virginia, but throughout the entire South, is more emphatic, if possible, than any of its colleagues, in the fervency of its thankfulness over the event in question. It says that "the day which dawned upon the release of Davis was the brightest that ever shone upon the country." In the estimation of these journals, "grimvisaged war" has not only "smoothed its wrinkled front," but the leaders of the late contending forces are dallying together "to the lascivious pleasings of a lute."

Gen. Grant, the man under whose guid-ance gigantic rebellion was crushed, is received at what was the rebel capital with distinguished consideration, although his chief object in visiting Virginia, at all, was to view the spot upon which Gen. Lee surrendered, thus sealing the fate of the Southern Confederacy. This is all very fine and encouraging, but the most remarkable incident attending Davis' release, was the banquet given in Richmond, at which Horace Greeley presided. This post of distinguished honor was given him by unanimous consent, because of his magnanimity n giving freedom to the Southern chieftain 'Placid and benign," the old philosopher accepted the situation—so says the Inquirer -and from the manner in which he handled his knife and fork, that paper is quite satisfied that he has abandoned his Grahamite heresies. Instead of contining himself to brown brend and vegetables, he, like Justice Greedy, did ample justice to the "roast, the bake and boil," beside making visible indentations in the numerous side dishes which were so bountifully supplied. After the demolition of the good things, which was as complete as that of the rebellion itself, an individual who labored most vigorously to break up the Union of these States, arose and proposed the first toast, as follows: "A re-united North and South." This was intended to bring Greeley to his feet, which it did, when he responded, we are informed, in a very conciliatory manner, and hoped that the dissensions which occasioned our troubles were forever to be forgotten. In fact, the reconstructed individuals present at this banquet had a most interesting time of it; wine, that generous fluid, seems to have fired the Southern heart until it glowed with Prometheon heat in admiration of Greeley. We do not see that any "fair women" were present to grace this occasion but there were quite a number of brave men, which is "the same thing." Times, indeed, have strangely changed. But a few years ago, Mr. Greeley, addressing the Southern people, told them they must "root hog or die;" now he procures the release of the leader of the rebellion, and fares sumptuously with his friends in Richmond. The rebel leaders, Lee, Stonewall Jackson and others, are affectionately remembered, while the name of Lincoln is not even mentioned; and the banquet wound up, not by singing, as the rebels used to sing, "Jordan is a hard road to travel," but the scene was enlivened by a Mr. Cunningham chanting the pretty, plaintiff and melodious little ballad of "My pretty Jane." Well, it is better to be engaged in this festive manner, than to be paying big bounties to keep up cutting each other's throat. New Counterfeits.

A new but not dangerously made counterfeit of the denomination of ten dollars, purporting to be that of the Third Nationa Bank of Philadelphia, has made its appearance. The paper is of good quality, and the engraving is of a character well calculated to deceive. The engine-turning work around the figures is not, however, as sharp and distinct as the genuine, nor is the figuring and lettering as plain and as perfect. The work upon the back of the note, which in the genuine is beautifully clear and distinct, and perfect in every curve, in the counterfeit is irregular, and no very close examination shows its fraudulent char-

It is almost perfectly engraved. The remedy is simply to sup-ply the blood with the necessary quantity of iron. This can be done by using the PERUVIAN SYRUP,

To take medicine to cure diseases occasioned by a dediciency of IRON IN THE BLOOD, without restoring it to the system, is like trying to repair a building when the foundation is gone.

An emment divine says. "I have been using the PERIV'LIA SYRUP for some time past; it gives me new vigor, buoyancy of spirits, clasticity of muscle." Pamphlets containing certificates of cures and recommendations from some of the most emment physicians, clusymen and others, will be sent free to any address.
