Gen. Pope and B. R. Milk. Our readers may remember, that we plublished an editorial in our columns some onths ago, in which we called the attention of the people and of the Government to the fact that the rebels-defeated on the hattle-fiel |-were allowed to polaca the minds of the people on the subject of the occuses of the war, and to sow the seeds of nother rebellion by keeping alive a sectional feeling in the South, and liouising in to notoriety the defeated ruffians and sink tors who had inaugurated the rebellion. The particular instances to which we then miled attention, were the publication of the life of the cut-throat and rebber, Moseby, (of course, by the Harpers,) and "The war hetween the States," by A. A. Stephene, we forget by whom published, the very ittle of the latter work being treason. Now at the time of writing the article in question, we hardly had the vanity to hope that so humble a sheet as the "Contains SPY" and so feeble a pun as ours, gould move the great Government of the United hope that our suggestions would be endorsed by journals wielding a larger influence. and that we might be thus indirectly instrumental in effecting the desired object-we were disappointed, however. The government has concluded to be magnanimous, (?) and to allow the treason which was defeated in the field, to hold high carnival in the papers and floating literature of the day. Ve have seen the offects and are seeing it daily; Davis liberated and sent on a tour to Canada to raise up friends and partisans for a fresh insurrection; the rebei General Beauregard a welcome guest in New York. What we failed to effect, may be effected rewever through other agencies. Gen. Pope has officially notified the government that the work of reconstruction consot go on while such postlient fellows as B, H, Hill and his brother traitors are allowed to use their personal and social infinence against it, and urges the necessity of getting rid of them. The suggestion coming from such good authority is warmly seconded by the loyal press throughout the country, which we are exceedingly rejoined to perceive and we may reasonably hope that the government will appreciate the soundness of his riews. While the government is dissing this quisition, we hope ther will descend also to give a moment's could be the form to the immediate and here. —The passion for collecting curiosities is too frequently carried to excess, and much time and money is expended upon objects worthless in themselves and without value in their associations. After doing justice to a bountful repast, we took stage for Callahana, five miles up the mountain; here let meask your readers to call to mind the old stage coaches drawn by four horses, in which the passengers are oranmed promiscously together, and they will have an idea of the joining and thumping we received on our ride to this place. The ascent of the mountain by moonlight was terribly grand; the deep mountain gorges and rocky precipices, the short turns around projecting rocks with huge chasms yawning below us, sent an occasional treasor over us; the breaking of a wheel, or the frightening of the horses would have sent the stage rolling down the mountain thousands of feet. At 10 o'clock P. M., we reached Chilahans, a beautiful roadside inn, where we were received by Samuel Dixon. At eight o'clock we again took our seats in the stage, the baggage was strapped on, and off we started for the White Sulphur Springs, a'ride of sixteen miles up the mountains. Up, up we went at the rate of two-and-a-half miles an hour, until with a sigh, of relief we began to descend and were congratualting ourselves that the worst of our journey had been pussed, when our Jehut informed us that the mountain we had just crossed was the Little Allegheny and that we had still to sieend the Big Allegne-ny. The view up the mountains was sue, and the ride, although techous, was one we enjoyed highly. When we reached the top we found the streams all howing west into the Greenbriar and Kanawha rivers and knew that that was the dividing line between the two States, and that we had at lust reached West Virginia.

This old and famous resort is situated a few miles west of the Alleghenies; and the liotel accommodations, under the charge of Col. Geo. L. Peyton & Co., are equal to the entertainment of over one thousand guests. It is surrounded on all sides by mountains; Greenbriar, Allegheny and Kates mountains; Greenbriar, Allegheny and kates mountains are the most prominent. The air is asalubrious and exceedingly beneficial to invalids, but the chief attraction is the water. It is seed boneficially by rheunsideand, paralubrius it. When we resched here we were a little skeptical as to its efficacy, but after having used it several days we have come to regret our imprudence, and agree with a gentleman now here from Clearfield county, Pa., who told us this morning that its tendency was to reduce those who used it. It is used boneficially by rheunsideand paralytic persons. Many who came here on crutches now walk around without even the use of a cane.
