General Grant on the Nations Finances.

The Washington Chronicle says that General Grant regards the financial condition of the country as second in importance only to the great question of national reconstruction, and regards all impediments to the latter, not only on account of their manifestly evil influence in exciting rebellious passions, but because they add largely to our national indebtedness. He is anxious for a speedy reconstruction of the Union as is compatible with safety and the permanent security of the rights of the people. By the people he means everybody—not a mere class, as has heretofore been the case in the South. He has great faith in the recuperative energies of the nation and does not doubt that, with an economical Administration, the taxation of the country might safely be reduced to the standard necessary for expenditures, inclusive of interest on the public debt, leaving the payment of the debt itself to the growth of the country, which he thinks will be a very rapid upon adjustment of our difficulties. He is therefore desirous to see reconstruction accomplished in accordance with the just wishes, and upon the magnanimous policy of the reconstruction measures, that our Governmental expenditures may be safely reduced to a peace standard.

Mad Anthony Wayne.

A correspondent, writing to the Fort Wayne Gazette, relates rather a curious incident connected with the death and subsequent burial of this venerable patriot. He says:

"Mad Anthony Wayne expired at Erie, Pennsylvania, in 1796, of an attack of malignant gout. His remains were buried there, but Col. Wayne, his son, employed Dr. Wallace to disinter and prepare them so as to be packed in the smallest possible space. By him the bones were separated and, under his supervision, the flesh boiled off, then packed in a box, and lashed behind the sulkey of Col. Wayne, were taken to the family burial place, and there deposited in Radnor—St. David's Episcopal Church, fourteen miles west of Philadelphia. Here the Pennsylvania Society of Cincinnati erected a monument bearing this inscription:

"Major General Mad Anthony Wayne was born at Waynesboro, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1745. After a life of honor and usefulness, he died in December, 1796, at Erie, Pennsylvania, then a military post on Lake Erie. Commander in chief of the army of the United States."

The Republican Party in the South.

Letters received in Washington, says a correspondent, by the Republican Congressional Executive Committee, represent great activity among the Republican party throughout all the Southern States. Georgia and Alabama are considered good for forty thousand majority, and all the other States are believed to be safe beyond doubt, although Mr. Johnson should vote all of the rebels pardoned by the late proclamation. Counting them in, they will not change the result in any single State.

The effect of the last proclamation has been to stimulate the Union men of the South to renewed energy, to prevent beyond all possibility of a doubt, their States being placed again under the rule of Secessionists. The Congressional Executive Committee are extending their labors all over the South, and will not relax their efforts until they have a Republican organization in every county in every Southern State.

A young girl from Holmesdale, Pennsylvania, rang the bell of a boarding house on West Houston street, a few days ago, and asked to be admitted. The Madame, for a wonder, reported the application to Captain Mills, and the gentleman instantly sent an officer for the girl, and prevailed upon her to return to her home in Pennsylvania. The motive which urged her to take this perilous course was the desire to earn two hundred dollars to pay off a mortgage on her mother's house. Two other young girls are in the Wooster street Police Station, aged respectively thirteen and fourteen, who have been likewise rescued.

Here is a "specimen brick" for such of our belligerent editors as delight in newspaper wars. Two of the papers in Kansas are having it hot and heavy. One says of the other: "We look down upon the impertinent, puddle-headed, rattle-brained, empty-blackguard with the same contempt as the lordly buffalo bull does on the dirty, ant-hill, whose puny inhabitants he crushes with his foot."
