Eight to Sixteen. Lord Shaftsbury recently stated in a public meeting in London, that, from personal observation, he has ascertained that of adult mule criminals of that city nearly all had fallen in a course of crime between the ages of eight and sixteen years; and that if a young man lived an honest life up to twenty years of age, there were forty-nine chances in favor, and one against him, as to an honorable life there-

This is a fact of singular importance to fathers and mothers, and shows a fearful responsibility. Certainly a parent should secure and exercise absolute control over the child under 17. It cannot be a difficult matter to do this, except in very rare cases and if that control is not very wisely and efficiently exercised, it must be the parent's fault; it is owing to the parental neglect or remissness. Hence the real source of ninety-eight per cent, of the real crime in a country such as England or the United States, lies at the door of the parents. It is a leafful reflection. We throw it before the minds of the fathers and mothers of our land, and there leave it to be thought of in-wisdom, remarking only as to the early seeds of bodily disease that they are, in nearly every case, sown between sundown and bedtime, in absence from the family circle; in the supply of spending money never earned by the spender, opening the doors of confectioneries and soda fountains, of beer and tobacco and wine shops, of the circus, the negro minstrel, the resturant and dance, follows the Sunday excursions, the Sunday drive, with the easy transition to the company of those whose ways lead to the gates of social, physical and moral ruin. From eight to sixteen—in these few years are the destinies of children fixed in forty-nine cases out of fifty-fixed by the

The Mystery of Punctuation. An old compositor tells this anecdote in a New England paper: "We remember, a number of years ago, when we were at work in a book office near Boston, the copy was received for a scientific work. The copy was manuscript, with every letter well formed, every capital letter in its proper place, every word distinct, and punctuated. It was plain as reprint, and called by the compositors the best manuscript copy they had seen. The copy was given out to the compositors a few pages at a time, who set it up and punctuated it as they had been in the habit of doing, each as he thought the sense required. The proof-reader read the proofs, made a few changes in the punctuation as he did in most of the proofs, and the matter was corrected. Another proof was taken and corrected, and when thirty or forty pages were ready they were sent to the author for his inspection. In a few days the proofs came back, with the punctuation marked freely. It was corrected, of course, and the compositors then got orders to follow copy in punc-tuation. They did so, and another lot was forwarded to the author, punctuated exactly according to the copy. It due time these proofs came back, and with the punctuation marked more than before, if that were pos-sible. This irritated the proof-reader some-what, and he sent the scientific author a not very polite note, saying: "If I can't punctuate this work to suit you, and you can't punctuate it to suit yourself, what are you going to do?' In reply, the author id he wasn't aware he had been correcting

A Lecture on the Nature, Treatment and Radical Cure of Spershlatoreniosa, or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Emissions, Sexual Debility, and Impediments to Marriage generally. Nervousness, Consumption, Epilipsy, and First Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from Self-Ahnes, &c.—by Hobser Book, &c.

The world-ron-world author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own-experience that the awful consequences, of Self-Abnes, may be effectually removed without medicine, and without dangerous surgical operations, bougles, instruments, rings, or cordials, pointing out a mode of cure at once certain and effectual, by which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheapily, privately, and radically. THIS LECTURE WILL PROVE A BOON TO THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS.
