Brigham young's Consistency.— "In less the leaders of the dominant party, will in all probability, nominate a radical for President, which, will be strongly opposed by the conservative, portion of that party, who are now urging the claims of Gen., Grant.: The Radicals know that Gen. Grant is an honest man and a brave soldier, and that, if he is elected President, Radicalism, will case-to exist as an element of power. Gen. Grant is the most popular man in the United States, he is loved by all the Radicals, because he is honest. He is the only man around whom, the conservative element of all parties will raily, and that too in such overwhelming numbers thathe would carry nearly every State in the Union, aninst any Radical that can be nominated. We are at present decidedly in favor of running Gen. Grant for tho next President of the Unicd States."

But what a change has lately come over the spirit of his dreams. Now Brigham calls him "Grave-Yard Grant," "Liar," "Drunkard," and licaps upon him all the low, vile abuse and slander, that his pork.

brains can herald forth. A few months ugo, and one would think General Grant was the embodiment of all that was good and noble; for in every issue of a certain Rebel sheet, Grant was presented in the most favorable light. By flattery and every other means, the Copperheads attempted to win the great Soldier, and had, even through a recreant, and bad man in the Presidential Chair, laid snares to entrap and capture the greatest General of the age; but Grant, having met rebels on the field, and thwarted their plans there, he was not the less able to combat treason and treachery in "high places," and placing himself firmly in the right, he deals a blow at his enemies and the enemies of his country, that made Andrew Johnson quake in the Chair he disgraces, and every Copporhead, big and little, howl with rage. Now, since Grant could not be captured by his old enemies in a new disguise, their flattery and fawning has turned to abuse and vituperation. Now he is denounced as he was when eading the hosts of the Union to victory. Having whipped and scattered rebel hordes, he was then called by these same men as "Butcher," "Drunkard," Briggari, and every vile name that could be found in Copperhead vocabulary. And why all this abuse? Because he had fought against and whipped their rebel friends. And now again, after a long silence, during which the General was quietly attending to his business, the enemies of the country were plotting his destruction, and the rain of the country he fought to save; when he, as of old turns upon his enemies and in one blow sends them trembling back to their dens to helch new plans of treason fevery relet and Copperhead in the land spill forth Ho is a decaiser now, of course he is; he decorred the robels after the battlo i'hiladelphia Correspondence. PRILADELPHIA, Tob. 11th, 1863. FRIEND RAMBO: In my last I gays you some idea as to the advancement and im-provement of business localities in our city. As a further illustration for the progress of the times. I swould name the new bunk As a further illustration of the progress of the times; I would name the new bank buildings, which are becoming quite, a feature of Philadelphia. Only a few years ago, one had to be vigituate order to find the sign of the bank he was seeking, or clso he might have passed it by; but now the imposing fronts of many of their would draw his attention, and from a description of these alone, he might find the desired one. For some years the fine building of the Philadelphia and Farmers and Mechanics, banks have attracted universal attention. Last year the First National Bank was moved into an imposing structure with a massive front of granits, on Chestnut street above Third, a building, which, add much to the beauty of that part of the street. And this year others are following in its footsteps; and erecting handsome and attractive fronts. The Third and Arch street, will hereafter shine with, they lustre, are entirely new building laving been ferected for the street. Its appearance will be the corner. The will be mediately on the corner. The worth National Bank, on Arch above Seventh street, has been thoroughly remodeled and will have a sanded front of a sind-stone, and the entrance to the bank will be immediately on the corner. The seventh National Bank, on Arch above Seventh Street, has been thoroughly remodeled, and will have a sanded front of a brown colors: A handsome marble front will distinguish the bank, on Market street, just above Broad. This is a great step in the improvement of the age, and proves that architectural beauty and the comfort of the workingmen, of the banks, are the ginning to be more sought after than the mere making of money. Large and siry, instead of close, pentup rooms, now make that kind of labor much more attractive as well as less injurious than it was in years gone by.

Amongst the projected improvements in Philadelphia, is a new Masonic Temple. A somewhat limited description of it has been published, which I will here give. It will, no doubt, prove interesting to the readers of the Spr, especially to the Masonic portion of them:

"The Masons have purchased a lot, one hundred and fifty by two hundred and fifty feet, at the corner of Broad and Filbert streets, on which they intend to creet a new Masonic Hall? The contract for erection has been given to Mr. J. H., Windritm, and he guarantees to lay the corner stone, next St. John's Day, and finish the 'edifice five' years' hence, at a cost of three-fourths of a million of dollars. The present building, on Chestnut street, has been deemed unfill for its purpose, although it was dedicated in 1855. The new hall, will be of, granite, and in the Norman style; the massive character of, this, order of, architecture, however, being well, relieved by the arrangement of the building will be front on Broad street will present one of the most magnificent features of this thorough fare. The building will be for granite, the only difference in the design being in the front on Broad street will present one of the word and sore, and above which well compass, etc. The tower at the south west corner of the building will be three stories in height. The front on Broad street will present one of the batconies at the windows, and the ballus-trades and general ornamentation or this portion of the structure will greatly add to the beauty of the whole design. The tower at the north-west corner of the front, will be much less in height, but will contain in its ornamentation the same goneral features. The remaining three sides of the building will be relieved by buttresses between the windows, and the whole effect of the exterior will be at once massive and graceful. The portice at the front, being twenty feet in advance of the film of the building, will still further add to the beauty of the design. On the first floor, raised eight feet from; the ground, a hall twenty leet in width will run the entire length of the building from east to west, and from this will start two stairways which it is asserted will exceed in magnificence anything of the kind in the United States.
