The words "Feltow" and "Feltowship" in their pure sense, denote a relation—and a kind relation to others. "Feltow" has by the influence of an unaccountable custom frequently been, and is now used as a term of contempt, but in the true classical English sense of the word, it implies a reference of equality and kindness to others. Thus we say "good feltowship," and the words are thus used in the Bible. In one passage (which might well be our motto) it is said. "If they fall, the one will lift up his "fellow." "They gave to me and Barmabas the right hand of "fellow- ship."—Gal. 2-0. "That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye always have 'fellowship' with us." Other passages might be quoted to prove the kind, and friendly signification of the words. Are they not then exceedingly appropriate when applied to an institution, the great object of which is to assist each other in the disenses and disasters of life? "If one fall, his fellows lift him up," and in prosperity to cultivate mutual kind "fellowship" is a sublime institution, having for its fundamental principles, universal benevelence and brotherly love, stimulating its members to deeds of charity, and con- ferring upon them dignity and respect, to the faithful heart furnishing a balm for every affliction, tempering and controlling the passions, fortifying the beart and pre- paring us for "fellowship" with the angelic host, and spirits of the just made perfect, in the celestial city not made with	ready for press.
