The lark may sing her sweetest song,
As rising from the waving corn,
On souring wings she skims along
To welcome in the rising morn.
But her loveliest song is naught to me,
Compared to home's sweet harmony. Deep in the woods the nightingale,
At midnight hour may tune her lay,
May pour upon the list ning vale
Her loveliest streams of melody.
But her midnight lay is naught to me,
Compared to home's sweet harmony.

Sweet are the songsters of the spring, And of the summer's sumy days; And autumn's feathered warblers sing, In rapturous strains, their sweetest lays. But the joyous songs of bower and tree, Are naught beside home's harmony. But the joyous songs, &c.

When time's dark clouds above us lower, And life's dread winter o'er us comes, 'Tis then we feel your magic power, Ye songsters of our hearts and homes. For the dearest joys on garth to me, Are found in home's sweet harmony. Yes, the dearest joys, &c.

The New Hampshire Election. The brilliant and decisive victory in Nev Hampshire last week was more than the Republicans expected—perhaps more than they had a right to expect. The vigorous vitality of the party is again domonstrated. Its strength and coherence will be the marvel of future readers of history. It has resisted the armed attack of a great Robellion and carried the country safely through a terrible war. It has survived the treachery of those in whom it trusted and who basely betrayed it. And now it rises superior to the folly and recklessness of those who are permitted temperarily to usurp the posi tion of leaders. The reason of its success is not difficult of discovery. The party is sound at the core and rests on a foundation of unselfish principle. It has its narrow-minded self-seekers, its ambitious hangerson, its plundering camp-followers; all successful popular organizations have. But the great mass of the party is crystalized on a bases of integrity and patriotism on which the people have learned to rest with confidence. On Tuesday last, the line of march was taken up in the great campaign of 1868. State after State, following the example of New Hampshire, will fall in the ranks, and the Republican party will once again move in solid column to certain
