Miscellaneous Zeading. Oh, how it kills! What wretchedness it entails upon society. Shall it still continue scattering disease and death around us in its most apalling forms? Who is responsible for this wholesale murder? Some must answer for it. How dreadful will be the reckoning for him " who can face the Judge when He cometh, and say he had an agency in murdering his fellow-crea tures?" God will charge the distiller, the rum-seller, the moderate drinker, yea, even the farmer who sells his grain, the preciougrain that God gives us for food, to distillers to convert it into a deadly poison. He will charge all these as accessories to the murder of husbands, sons, mothers and daughters. Who can stand such a fearful reckoning? Whose skirts are clean from the blood of our fellow-creatures? And is there is one father or mother in the land suffering, or who has suffered from intemperance, and who reads this; carnestly do we implore you from the bottom of our heart, brother or sister, to join us for your young one's sakes. It is better a thousand times for them, here and hereafter, for your peets of eternity, that you begin now to warn them of the insulions evils lurking around and within the convivial cup; warn them against the thing itself, or sporting with its allurements. It may begin in hilarity and end in death. Have you not seen it so? And even among your nearest and dearest, have you not felt it so? If the drinkers of the world would only give utterance to their thoughts, on this point, we know they would acknowledge this to be true as the Gospel of their Savior. The ruin of almost every broken down, dissolute, destitute family in civilized society, has begun, or been precipitated by the moderate use of strong drinks, growing into habits of inebriety. Every drunkard's confession in christendom would amount to this. Every drankard's wife can sob out the same; and every drunkard's child, a "worse than orphau" on our streets, in our asylums and prison yards, is an every day attestation of the truth of this statement. God says: "Woe to him that put-teth the cup to his neighbor's lips." If you value peace and happiness; if you desire to answer the great purposes that God had in view in placing you on this earth, then go to work. Work, I say! Do good to your fellow-men. Reclaim the wandering. Relieve the distressed. Warn the youth of sin's descructive ways. Show by your life that you are carrying out these great_principles. Then you will be a blessing in the community, and when dead and gone from the earth, you will still be in the grateful remembrance of those that you ministered unto; and on your tombstone may be inscribed the words, "Though dead but still liveth." G. M. C.

The Light-Hearted People. There are people who habitually make the best of things, not from a sense of duty, not from a dislike of sympathy, not from any shrinking from pain on their own account or for others, but simply from a natural and unconquerable lightness of Klux most do flourish. hearts. These people supply the oxygen of the moral atmosphere, and should be maintained at the public expense to keep it sweet and pure. Even if instead of being, as they generally are, active and otherwise estimable members of society, they did nothing but enjoy life, they would still be worth cultivating for the sake of the light and heat which they kindle. The only difficulty is how to regulate them. They are so irresistibly impelled to sing songs that, in a world where heavy hearts are unfortunately common, it is difficult always o keep the vinegar and nitre apart. It is inreasonable to expect any great consideration for the susceptibilities of melancholy people from the constitutionally cheerful, ecause the very fact of their being so mplies a certain degree of insensibility, which involves a corresponding amount of blindness to other people's sensibility. A genuinely cheerful person makes the best of your troubles because they really do not appear to him very distressing, and it is for you to decide whether such a view will not m your mind as a tonic or an irritant .--London Saturday Review.

John Allen Once More. The reformation of John Allen, the Water street dance-house keeper, who has been extensively paraded as the "Wickedest Man" in New York, has been exceedingly short-lived. For some time past it has been understood that Allen had gone back to his old ways, and that his dancehouse had once more been devoted to the infamous business that had before caused it to be a by-word in the Fourth Ward. All the rumors circulated on the subject were more than confirmed at the Toomb police court Saturday morning, where John and his "family" were brought before Justice Dowling, on a charge of disorderly conduct and theft. It appears that at an early hour that morning a sailor named Benjamin Swan, from Baitimore, went into John's place and drank once or twice. During the night one of the girls stole Swan's pocket-book. containing fifteen dollars. Missing his pocket-book a short time afterwards, Swan caused the arrest of the girl, and on being taken to the station-house she declared that she had given it to Mrs. Allen. This the latter denied. When these facts were reported to Captain Thorne he ordered the arrest of all the inmates of the-house, which

John, his wife, Mary, four females, and a rough character known as " Boston Tom," a superintendent in Allen's place, were taken in custody. When arraigned before Justice Dowling, Allen seemed to think that he had been hardly used, and declared that it was a prosecution on the part of some of his enemies. He expressed himself as very auxious to be released, and offered to entirely abjure politics this fall, if allowed to go. The magistrate informed him that he did not allow politics to influence his decision. Finally, Allen offered to forego voting if allowed to depart with his "family." This offer was also rejected. Allen said: "Only for the kindness of the police I never could have kept my place for so many years. They have always been my friends." [Laughter.]

The magistrate finally decided to hold Allen, his wife, and the girl above-mentioned to bail on the respective charges of keeping a disorderly house and petty lareny. Allen succeeded in procuring ball, and the company were then allowed to go, the three remaining females agreeing to leave the city and lead better lives.

Trouble in Arkansas. Governor Powell Clayton, of Arkansas, short time ago, apprehending outbreaks n that State, purchased, in St. Louis, a mantity of arms, which were shapped to Memphis, Tenn., en route for Little Rock, Arkansas. At Memphis, great defliculty was experienced in obtaining transportaion, the captains of the river steamers declining to take the boxes of muskets as a part of their cargoes. At last the steamer lesper consented to transport the arms, and proceeded on lar trip to Little Rock, but while taking in wood at Cat Island, on the Mississippi river, on the evening of October 16th, she was captured by a party of one hundred disguised men, and the guns vere seized and destroyed. The assailants had previously captured the tug Nettie Jones, and made use of that vessel in their expedition. Governor Clayton has teleaphed the above facts to Secretary Schofield, and asserts that armed resistance to the United States forces there are entirely inadequate to preserve order.

German Immigration been organized in various portions of the monstrated in this place that women excels United States for the purpose of maturing as a farmer. I have met more than a dozen plans for rendering assistance and protection to German emigrants. A convention | large gardens, and they are the finest I have of delegates from these associations was held in Baltimore on Saturday last, the and beautiful flowers. One lady, who does principal object of which was to devise all the work in her garden, and who, I had such measures as will best promote and protect emigration. Delegates from the North South East and West were in attendance, and as amongst them were some of the most prominent friends of the cause in the country, the result of the convention is looked for with feelings of great interest. At this time labor in some sections of the country is in great demand, and more especially in the large agricultural districts of the West and Northwest, and as greater activity in farming operations will prevail in those sections the coming season than ever before, the wages paid will be such as to make it quite an object with the poorly paid laborers of Germany to seek this more promising field. WE take the following summary of Demeratic outrages perpetrated in the South a few days ago, from the New York Tribune, of Monday: As the spirit of the Rebel Democracy goes out at the South it rends them. We have details this morning of the brutal murder of the Hon. George W. Smith of the Texas Constitutional Convention; of the ssassination of the Sheriff and Parish Judge of St. Mary's Parish, Louisiana; of the murder of a South Carolina State Senator in broad daylight, on the platform of a chasers, that healthy meat is firm and elasrailroad car; and of the murder of a Deputy | tie to the touch, and hardly moistens the Sheriff in Arkansas-an old and highly respected citizen, who was tied to a negro, so that the single shot gave them a common death. Beside these we have the disarming of United States troops by Quantrell's band, Ku-Klux outrages in North Carolina, and a variety of minor occurrences, which knife, or pouring a little warm water over serve to show that they have not heard of it when chopped. It loses, also, ten per the elections yet in the regions where Ku-

A LETTER has just reached Washington from Captain DuBois, of the Third United States Cavalry, now stationed at Sante Fe, New Mexico, in which he says that the order against Jews, issued at Holly Springs, Miss., about which the Democrats have made so much noise, was addressed to his own command, and without the knowledge of General Grant, and that for so doing he, Captain DuBois, was suspended from command. As to the order being issued "By order of General Grant," the General never heard or saw anything of it ing the fruit to touch; paper should be until it appeared in the public press.

There's another lie nailed to the counter. PREPARATIONS are being made by the Soldiers' and Sailors' National Republican Executive Committee to welcome General Grant upon his return to Washington, in about a fortnight, with becoming ceremonies. A torchlight procession, with bands of music and transparencies, will parade the streets, and it is expected there will be a large turn out and an imposing display.

The Farmer's Fireside. round the fire one wintry night, The farmer's rosy children sat; The tagget lent its blazing light. And mirth went round, and harmless chat.

Low tapping at the bolted door, And thus to gain their willing ear, A teeble voice was heard implore: Cold blows the blast across the moor

The sleet drives hissing in the wind; Yon toilsome mountain lies before, A dreary treeless waste behind. My eyes are dim and weak with age;

When, hark ! a gentle hand they hear

No road, no path, can I descry; And these poor rags ill stand the rage Of such a keen inclement sky. So faint I am, these tottering feet No more my paisfed frame can bear;

And drifting snows my tomb prepare. Open your hospital door. And shield me from the biting blast; Cold, cold it blows across the moor, The weary moor that I have passed."

My freezing heart forgets to beat,

With hasty steps the farmer ran, And close beside the fire they place The poor half-frozen beggar-man, With shaking limbs and pale-blue face. rhe little children flocking came,

And chafed his frozen hands in theirs; And busily the good old dame A comfortable mess prepares. Their kindness cheered his drooping soul,

And slowly down his wrinkled cheek he big round tear was seen to roll, And told the thanks he could not speak The children then began to sigh, And all their merry chat was o'er;

And yet they felt, they knew not why, More glad than they had done before, Women as Farmers.

Lizzie Leavenworth writes to the Revoluion, from Vineland, N. J., as follows: In Vineland, New Jersey, a place of ten thousand inhabitants, thirty-five miles south of Philadelphia, women are demonstrating what they can do at farming. These women are not coarse or illiterate. but some of them have been highly educated possess well-cultivated minds. I do not know how many there are here who own farms, which they have brought into cultivation solely by their own efforts, but I will speak of a few that have come under my immediate notice. The first one who gave me an account of her work is a maiden lady of about forty. She had been school teacher in Massachusetts for sixteen years; she got weary, as she said, of being the slave for others, and thinking a farmer's life more to her heart, came to Vineland and bought ten acres. She has been here three years, and has five acres in good bearing condition; all the work except the clearing of the land has been done by herself and a boy thirteen years old; and from being weak in some directions she has become strong and healthy. I next saw another maiden lady of the same age. She was educated as a physician, but her health giving way, she came here and bought ten acres; and with the assistance of only a boy she has five acres under cultivation, and she says she never had so the law is contemplated in Arkansas, and good health in her life. I have been in this place but a few weeks, and have made no effort to find out how oany such cases there A number of German associations have told there are many, and that it is well dewomen, who are widows and take all care of seen, abounding in the most delicious fruits noticed, had been engaged a few days past in painting the outside of her house, I was a little surprised on hearing the next week that she had on the Sabbath previous filled with good acceptance the pulpit of the Unitarian Church, in the absence of the minister. Indeed all the women I have met in this place are women of splendid minds; and oh, how glad they are to know that there is one spot on the earth where they can follow out their own natural feelings without being insulted on every side by conservatism and ignorance. Here, oo, they can dress with garments belitting their taste and work. These women wear both the short and the long; the short for the garden and kitchen, and the long for the parlor, thus combining use and taste in dress, rather than following fashion and custom. And so, too, in regard to diet; having plenty of vegetables and fruit, they make these their chief articles of living, and are not constantly inducing disease, as are people of the cities, by eating so much animal food. LIZZIE LEAVENWORTH. How to tell Diseased Meat.-In view of the fact that there is danger that diseased meat may find its way into market, it may be stated as a guide to meat purfingers. Diseased meat is soft and wet, and serum often runs from it. Good meat has but little odor, and that by no means lisagreeable. Diseased meat has a faint and candaverous smeil. This is best observed by cutting it and smelling the cent more in weight in cooking than when healthy. The disenses engendered by bad ment are chiefly diarrhea and tapeworm. It often creates carbuncles and boils. Care should be taken to have meat most thoroughly cooked if consumers wish to avoid all possibility of animalculæ. To PREPARE GRAPES FOR WINTER USE. Sotice the stem of the grape, and you will find that it is dried and withered near the branch; cut in dry weather as near the ranch as possible; remove all imperfect fruit, and pack them in boxes, with layers of the nicest wadding between, not sufferplaced between the grapes and the wadding, as the cotton often sticks to the grapes, and is troublesome to pick off. Keep the grapes in a cool place to preserve the fruit from the unpleasant flavor of the cotton. Should the season be backward and the stem still green, cut the grapes as close to the branch as possible and dip the end of the stem into melted sealing-wax immediately. Grapes preserve beautifully, by pursuing this course, most of the winter.

TO TAKE MILDEW FROM CLOTHES .- MIX soft soap with powdered starch, half as much salt, and the juice of a lemon; lay it on the part with a brush; let it lay on the grass day and night, till the stain comes out. Iron moulds may be removed by the salt of lemons. Many stains may be removed by dipping the linen in sour buttermilk, and then drying it in a hot sun; wash it in cold water; repeat this three or four times. Stains caused by acids may be removed by tying some pearl-ash up in the stained part; scrape soap in cold, soft water, and boil the linen till the stain is
