Strange Advertisement. For four or five months past we have noticed a singular advertisement in the Boston, New York and Philadelphia daily newspapers. It is as follows: "Dop—I am well, but we are in affliction, and I long for you that we may comfort one another. There is a letter for 'Dod' at the Post Office, New York. MA."

This advertisement is continued day after day, and, as we have stated, has been continued several months. The New York Sun says it has received over one hundred dollars for printing this advertisement; and other journals have probably received as much more. The San Francisco Times publishes the same; and in referring to it, says it is also published in the newspapers of China and Japan. What does it mean? Somebody is introuble, evidently, and they want somebody to comfort them. The advertiser must have expended over a thousand dollars in advertiseing for

GEN. CUSTAR, in an interesting report of his recent campaign against the Indians, after stating how he had rev captured two white ladies held by them as prisoners, and made subject in captivity to terrible indignities by the savages, says:

"The Indians express themselves heartily sick of the war, and are willing to go to that part of the country which has been designated for them, and are ready to submit to the decision of the govern-ment authorities." He further says: "We have taught the Indians that they are safe from us in no place, and at no season, and also, what some of our own people may doubt, that the white man can endure the inclemencies of winter as well as the Indians." He says that the country and the hiding places of the Indians are now better known, and that he has many officers in his command who could conduct an expedition there without guides.

The Balloon Voyage Across the At-

Mons. Chevalier, the distinguished æronaut who lately arrived in New York, for the purpose of making a balloon voyage hence to Europe, has leased Landmann's Park, Sixty-seventh street, and Third avenue, where he will make several ascents during the next two months, prior to his final departure on his great transatlantic voyage, which will be on the 31st of

More than 100 applicants have been received by M. Chevalier, from persons desirous to accompany him on his perilous trip. The price fixed for the passage, is $250, and not all who offer themselves at that price, will be accepted by the Professor as compagnons du voyage, as he wishes to take with him only such persons as are capable through mental and physical qualifications, of assisting him in his scientific observations, for the sake of which, chifley, this daring project is undertaken.

Money is said to be the "root of all evil!" but we are all anxious to get as much of this "root" as we possibly can, and willingly incur the risk of all the evil branches that may spring from it. And who will say that it is wrong? Is not gold the "open sesame" that admits us into the charmed circle of "Upper Tendom?" What are genius, virtue, honesty, or integrity? Valuable auxilaries, if you have gold for the principal; but utterly valuless standing alone. How seldom we see a person admitted into what is called "good society," merely because he possesses the "cardinal virtues," while, on the other hand, if he chance to have gold, or its equivalent, no matter what may be his principles, society opens its arms to receive him, delighting to do him honor.

We pretend to be republicans, and in a certain sense we are; and yet we are as a nation, greater worshippers of Mammon than any other people under the sun. Others have pride of caste, an aristocracy of birth, but nowhere is the worship of gold carried to such an extent. Does such a course tend to elevate and refine a nation? or does it degrade and debase it, by teaching that a man has only to make money in order to occupy a prominent position in society?

How often gold obtains place where only honesty, integrity, and sound practical sense should sit. How are we to institute reform in this matter? By recognizing true merit, whether we find it clothed in royal robes, or plain homespun; honoring a man for what he is, not merely for what he is worth in dollars and cents, by elevating men only as they deserve, not because they happen to be pretty good money making merchants.

We do not pretend to say that it does not require talent to make money-for it certainly requires shrewdness, and bussiness talent in order to get rich; but the nobler traits of heart and mind are often lost of in the pursuit of wealth.

When we find those whose lives are squarred by the golden rule, whose hearts have been kept pure by the teachings of the holy spirit, who are ever ready to lend a helping hand to their fellow creatures, whose ears are open to the cries of distress, who strive to cultivate the talents God has given them, and live more for others than themselves; we should show these that we do not consider them outcasts from society, even though they lack what is often considered the one thing ncedful-Money. Let us show them that we consider them superior to those who have passed their lives in folly, licentiousness, or selfishness, even though the latter may count thousands, where the former counts hundreds.

But we suppose when such a state of society exists, we may safely pronounce it the millenium. In the present state of society, we think the best advice is contained in the following lines: "Then get re money, no matter how, so question is asked of the rich I trow; 'Seal by dight, steal by day, 'Do it all in a legal way.

Dimes and dollars, dollars and dimes, An empty pocket is the worst of crimes,"
