Miscellaucous Beading. Demolition of the Home of Barbara Fritchie.
The last remnant of the old house where Barbara Fritchie lived and toiled has been removed, and laborers are now employed in digging some ten feet below the original foundation, as if to root out the spot of earth upon which it stood. A few days more and the tourist, the patriot, and the poet will have pointed to them the muddy waters of Carroll Creek as where once stood the weird old home of the faithful defender of her country's flag. It seems to have been the determination of our City Authorities to erace from the memory of man that the 'Fritchie woman ever lived, and guided by this desire the first step was to destroy the house in which she had lived, and where to Stonewall Jackson "Shoot if you must, this old grey head, But spare your country's flag, she said," and to the accomplishment of this object they turned all the genius and ability with which nature has so liberally gifted them. They first passed an ordinance to widen and straighten Carroll Creek; they then decided that the Fritchie bouse was in the line of fits. When a finely dressed lady, one look- his senior. the proposed improvement, and then agreed to " wipe the damned spot out." "Barbara Fritchie's work is o'er, The rebel tides his mads no more." Yet the spirit was predominant, and to gratify the batred of the house rendered immortal by the pen of the poet, they have in straightening the Creek absolutely made three sharp angles to strike the point at which they aimed. Sagacious men! know they not that "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church?" The name of Barbara Fritchie long shall live after that of those who "dressed in a little brief authority" shall have passed away forever. The tuneful Nine have it in care, and poetry and song shall waft it down to future ages. and men shall say that Whittier wrote when Barbara lived. Now that the long loved picturesque little house has gone forever, an air of romance and of mystery is thrown around it and its history, which could never have been so long as it stood a meterial object to the view, and as over the old site the sluggish waters of the Creek flow towards the Sea, they will yet whisper the name of Barbara o a free and loyal people. Photographs have been taken of it, and the pencils of artists will present it as pictured to the eye of genius, and their conceptions will yet adorn the palace and the cottage, wherever breathes that patriotic love of country of which Barbara Fritchie is the embodiment, and her house the stand-point.

On the desk before me I have two photo-on me kindly as I write, and seem to smile as I make the proposition that a monument on which shall be recorded her patriotism and heroism shall be erected in this city to her memory. On the pedestal might be necribed-"Up rose Burbara Fritchie then, Bowed with her four-score years and ten, Bravest of all in Frederick-town, She took up a flag the men hauled down. In her attic window tho staff she set, To show that one heart was loyal yet."

Thus did the Romans of their matrons. Let some one more able than I take up this subject, and the necessary money can be raised, if not here, in those parts of the country where honor and patriotism are still held in reverence and the love for the old flag still burns warm and true .--- ExA Western Drover's Story.

My name is Anthony Hunt. I am a drover, and I live miles and miles away up the western prairie. There wasn't a home within sight when we moved there, my wife and I, and now we have not many neighbors, though these we have are good ones. One day about ten years ago, I went away from home to sell tifty head of cattle-time creatures as ever I saw. I was to buy some groceries and dry goods before I came back, and above all, a doll for our youngest Dolly: she had never had a store doll of her own, only the rag babies her mother had Dolly could talk of nothing else, and went down to the very gate to call after me to taste wine occasionally; 17 taste ardent "buy a big one." Nobody but a parent can spirits; 35 drink ale or beer constantly; 14 understand how full my mind was of that toy, and how, when the cattle were sold, the first thing, I hurried off to buy Dolly's doll. I found a large one, with eyes that could had it wrapped up in paper and tucked it under my arm, while I had the parcels of calico and delaine and sugar and teaput up. Then, late as it was, I started for home. It might have been more prudent to stay until morning, but I felt auxious to get back, and eager to hear Dolly's prattle about her. I was mounted on a stendy-going old norse of mine, and pretty well loaded. Night set in before I was a mile from town and settled down dark as pitch, while I was in the middle of the wildest bit of road I knew of. I could have felt my way, though, I remember it so well, and it was almost that when the storm that had been brewing broke, and pelted the rain in torrents, five miles, or may be, six, from home yet, too. I rode on as fast as I could, but all of a sudden I heard a little cry like a child's voice! I stopped short and listened-1 heard it again. I called and it answered me. I couldn't see a thing; all was dark as pitch. I got down and felt about in the rass-1 began to wonder. Um not timid, but I was known to be a drover and to have money about me. It might be a trap to catch me unawares and rob and murder me. I am not superstitious-not very, but how could a real child be out on the prairie on such a night, at such an hour? It might be more than human. The bit of a coward that hides itself in most men showed itself to me then, I was halt inclined to run away, but once more I heard that cry, and said I: "If any man's child is hereabouts, Anthony Hunt is not the man to let it die." I searched again. At last I bethought me of a hollow under the hill, and groped that way, sure enough, I found a little dripping thing that mouncd and sobbed as I took it in my arms. I called my horse, and the beast came to me, and I mounted, and tucked the little soaked thing under my coat as well as I could, promising to take it home to mamniy. It seemed tired to death, and pretty soon eried itself to sleep against my bosom. It had slept there over an hour when I saw my.own windows. There were lights in them, and I supposed my wife had lit them for my sake, but when I got into the doos ward frank something was the conter, and stood still with a dead tear of heart for five minutes before I could lift the latch. At last I did it, and saw the room full of

> A NEW notion has been introduced at social parties in Paris. At the entrance of the saloon is placed a large covered basket containing small bouquets of flowers, and presided over by a modern Flora. Each guest plunges his or her hand into the basket and takes a posy, which the women atach to their dress or put in their hair, and the gentlemen place in their buttonhole. The latter promenades through the saloon, each in search of a lady wearing a similar bouquet to his own; and when she is found he has a right to take possession of her and retain her as a partner for the rest of the evening.

This question was pronounced in our hearing, a few days since, to a man who had been for several months unsuccessfully seeking employment as a clerk or a salesman in some of our leading houses. Complaining of his ill-luck, one of his friend-, who knew he had mechanical talent, but doubted whether he could make himself needful either as a clerk or salesman, put the interrogatory to him which we have placed as the caption of this article. The eply was, that a trade was not so respectible as a mercantile occupation. Under this delusive idea, our stores are crowded with young men who have no capacity for business, and who, because of the lancied respectability of doing nothing, waste away their minority upon salaries which can not possibly liquidate their expenditures.

Late, too late in life, they discover their error, and before they reach the age of thirty, many of them look with envy upon the thrifty mechanic, whom, in the days of their boybood, they were accustomed to deride. The false views of respectability which prevail in the soi-disant fashionable society of the present day but ruined thousands of young men, and will rum thou-

Willis, which was one means, it is said, of securing him a wife, Every one knows that Willis and his sister, Mrs. Eldridge (Fanny Fern) were then most cordial haters of each other--she alleging that be had treated her most unkindly when she was a poor widow struggling with two children for a livelihood. Mrs. Eldridge had already attracted attention as a writer, and something she had printed Parton admired and republished in the Journal. Willis was much offended by the appearance of the article, and complained of it to the sub-editor, who defended it and heard of the circumstance accidentially, and Interesting to Pork-Enters.

The habitual diet of farmers, merchants and laborers in this country is composed of pork. In a healthy condition pork is nour-ishing and satisfying, and it is just the though build up the mucles and sustain the energies of one who does out-door work. But in cases which seem to be growing more and more frequent, the flesh of hog is infeeted with parasites which are dangerons to human health, and not unfrequently destroy lite. Dr John C. Dalton, a distinguished scientific and practical man, in a lecture recently published, says:

"The pig seems to be the animal naturally the most liable to trichinosis. He is certainly more liable to this disease than any other animal used for tood, neither the sheep nor the ox being subject to it. It has been found in this country, by investiga tions in Chicago in 1866, that of all the pigs brought to market in that city, one in fifty s infected with triching. This shows that we are all in danger of becoming infected by the use of pork, unless measures be taken in preparing the meat, to destroy the vitality of the worms. Smoking and salting will not do this effectually. Only thorough cooking is to be relied on as a safeguard. It is remarkable that most, if not all of the cases of trichinosis in this country. thus far have occurred among the Germans This is because they have the habit, not otherwise common here, of eating ham, sausage, and even sometimes fresh pork, nearly or quite in the uncooked state. To kill the worms the ham must not only be salted and smoked, but must be cooked, and cooked thoroughly. Now, if you bear in mind that one pig in fifty is infected with trichina, you will perhaps think many times before putting between your lips a piece of pork, or ham, or sausage in the raw state; you will be certain that it is cooked: and not only that, but thoroughly cooked. One of the worst cases of trichino sis that has come under my observation was caused by eating pork chops which were rare or slightly underdone. Now, these chops were probably well enough cooked on the outside; but on the inside they were red and juley, and the danger was precisely the same as if the patient had taken the meat entirely raw. In order to destroy the vitality of the trichina the meat should be subjected to a temperature of 212 degrees F. Now, if you boil a ham for half su hour, or even an hour, you do not nesessarly subject all parts of it to this tempera-ture. In the central parts of the hain the conpensions will not rise to that point unless the boiling has been long continued. I speak of this particularly, as it is a very important matter. A temperature of less than 160 degrees P. does not destroy the trichina. As shown by direct experiment, therefore, a piece of trichinous meat, any part of which has not been raised to or above this point, is just as dangerous as if. It were taken in the raw state. Those are the chief points of importance in regard to the trichina and trichinosis. The disease is fatal enough, frequent enough, and revolt-ing enough to induce us to take all possible measures to prevent it, and I do not think anything is sufficient for this but a personal examination of every piece of pork, ham, bacon or sausage, used as food to see that every part of it has been subject-

I seek not to flatter them; for before they can become this, they will have to make an earnest effort of one or two kinds.
