Mark Twain says when women frame laws the first thing they do will be to enact:

1. That all men should be at home at ten P. M., without fail. 2. That married men should bestow considerable attention upon their own wives. Since the state of the s to sell whiskey in saloons, and that fines and disfranchisement should follow it in such places.

4. That the smoking of cigars to excess should be forbidden, and the smoking of pipes utterly abolished.

5. That the wife should have the title to her own-property when she marries a man that hadn't any.

"Such tyranny as this," says Mark, "we never could stand. Our free souls never endure such degrading thraldom Women, go, away! Seek not to beguile us of our imperial privileges. Content yourself with your little feminine triflesyour babies, your benevolent societies and knitting -and let your natural bosses to the voting. Stand back-you will be wanting to go to war next. We will let you teach school as much as you want to, and pay you half price, too; but beware! ; e don't want you to crowd us too much."

A. Poser.

A calm, blue-eyed, self composed, and self possessed young lady, down East, received a call the other day from a prying old spinster, who after prolonging her stay beyond even her own conception of the young lady's endurance, came to the main question which had brought her hither. "I've been asked a good many times if you are engaged to Dr. C- Now, if folks inquire again whether you be or not, what shall I say to them?" "Tell' em' answered the young lady, fixing her calm blue eyes in unblushing steadiness upon the inquisitive features of her interrogator "tell them that you think you don't know' and that you are sure it's none of your business.

A CORRESPONDENT sends us this old, old story, which, however, will bear repeating. In the early settlement of New England there arose quite a controversy between the pastor of a church and the choir respecting the introduction of a violin as an aid in sacred music The pastor violently and stoutly opposed its use, regarded it as a great innovation upon the customs and proprieties of religious worship. He was finally overruled in the matter; and; on the following Sabbath, as the morning services were about to commence he observed the violin. As he was about to read the first hymn, he said: "The choir will fiddle and sing the twenty-fifth hymn" much to the amusement of his many hearers.

ONE of Mark Twain's farmers bought some Bartlett pear trees; and the next season he took some of the fruit to the tree-dealers. "What kind of pears do you call these?" "Well, I don't know : Button pears, perhaps." "But tney grew on one of the trees you sold me for a Bartlett!" "Are you such a fool," was the dealer's rejoinder, "as to suppose that a tree is going to bear Bartlett pears the first
