On Wednesday we were twice agreeably surprised. On returning to the office at noon we found a magnificent boquet of choice flowers (sorry we can not read their language) and a sparkling"Sherry Cobbler' The unknown donors have our thanks.

THE MIRROR.-The second number of the MIRROR was issued on Wednesday last, and besides being a creditable sheet typographically, presents unusual prosperity in the large number of first-class advertisements. Three thousand copies have been printed and distributed with much care.

RESTAURANT RE-OPENED .- The Franklin House Restaurant has been re-opened, and will be conducted in the name, and under the supervision of Mr. Frank Farrell, who is pleasant, obliging and devoted to business. The Restaurant will be re-furnished at an early day and nothing left undone to provide the public with first class accommo-

Big Saw.-We noticed in the office of the Adam's Express Company, this city, last Saturday, a very large and handsomelooking circular saw-the largest, it is said ever shipped to this county-for Thomas & Mason, from the well-known firm of Welsh &Griffiths, Boston, Mass., whose advertisement has appeared in our columns for many months past .- Clinton Republican.

MOUNTVILLE ITEMS,-A two story brick church with basement 32 by 60 feet, is being built at Mountville, Pa., by the United Brethren congregation.

Also, a two story brick dwelling house by Wm. M. Roberts, County Treasurer. An attachment is to be added to the Mountville Hotel, by Peter. Scheid, Proprietor. These improvements show that Mountville is looking up and making some advancement.

OUR OFFICE .- We have just added to our office a large selection of wood and metal type, of the latest and most approved styles. We are now better prepared to execute job work in the highest style of the art, and not only to maintain, but exceed our past reputation for superior and cheap job print-

Our office has also been furnished with other valuable material, and this with the large job press, which we contemplate putting up at an early day, will give us facilities, not surpassed by any office in the county. Our patrons are invited to give us

This machine was invented and is manufactured in Lancaster County, and is consequently a home production. The machine as a washer proved a perfect success even beyond the expectations of every one present. It washes fine linen and muslin as well as heavy blankets, carpets &c. It washed the dirtiest blankets cleaner in five minutes than could be done in an hour by hand. The principle upon which it works is simple, and the strain and wear on the clothes are no greater than on an ordinary hand machine. Rumple & Son have been appointed sole agents for this machine, where it can be seen and bought

THE COLUMBIA CLASSICAL INSTITUTE .-In another column we give the programmes of the Institute exercises for Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week. This Institute has been in very successful operation in our midst for several years and possessing the advantages of location, surrounding magnificence of scenery, and healthfulness of situation, together with competent and efficient instruction, offers facilities rarely met with. We strongly advocate the cultivation of the higher and classical pursuits and studies, and welcome every institution which offers facilities for

THE LATE COLLAPSE AT THE ROLLING MILL.—The Lancaster Express of Saturday evening in commenting on our deductions AT John Fendrich's, the best Solace, Sunny-Side and Century fine cut chewing to bacco 8 cts. sold elsewhere at 10 cts. from the testimony at the coroner's inquest

Both jury and reporters speak of this explosion as a "collapse," but we are unable to find anything in the testimony or in the description of the injured boiler as detailed by those who saw it, to indicate that it was award by the "collapse of the". by those who saw it, to indicate that it was caused by the "collapse of a flue," As we understand it, both heads of the boiler were torn out, while the flue preserved its cylindrical form; and it so, there was, of course, no collapse. That the night engineer, Mr. Getz, did not so regard it, is evident from the fact that in his testimony he speaks of it as an "explosion."

The editor of the Express is altogether in the M. E. Church, on Wednesday and mistaken. The whole testimony proves a collapse, "both heads of the boiler" were perfect, uninjured and whole; one of the flues had collapsed, and had lost its cylindrical form. The iron of the flue was torn open nearly the whole length of the boiler, leaving no doubt whatever in the mind of the intelligent observer, but that the calamity resulted from a collapse. The fact that the night engineer speaks of it as an explosion, is no proof at all of its not having been a collapse. He used the popular terms "explosion" to denote the force of steam as people geneally do in whatever form it may have manifested that force.

For the Spy.

A GENTLEMAN asks, "Why is the conversation of young women, as a rule, soBuilding Castles in the Air senseless and insane? No cultivated man can listen to the talk of a party of girls without being either disgusted or ennuied to death. Women talk a great deal. Why not educate them to be thoroughly good conversationalists?" Why not, indeed? We will tell our friend why they are not EDITH DENNY. Kind Words so educated. They are trained to render themselves attractive to men, and sensible conversation from the lips of women would injure their chances for matrimony. We have more than once heard cultivated men ssert that aught beyond a knowledge of reading, writing and arithmetic ruin the best of women for life's duties. This being the prevailing opinion of the lordly sex, women are educated only in those branches which will render them acceptable in society. They acquire a few showy accomplishments; they dance a little, sing a little, dress with more or less taste, (generally less,) and flirt a great deal : and thus fulfil the destiny for which a majority of men think they were created. They enter social life with minds that are perfect blanks. Satisfied with the homage paid to their youth and beauty, they never feel the necessity of nobler development or $\boldsymbol{\alpha}$ MUSIC—DUETT......Invitation a la Danse. ANNIE PURPLE and LAURA EBERLEIN, more expanded mental culture. Gentlemen evince delight at their grace and pret tiness: they indulge them in-nay they even cater to-their follies, and the natural consequence is that women are content to remain pretty and foolish. Let those who desire to see young girls improve in this respect make some effort looking towards their reform. Let them substitute for idle and frivolous gossip some topics of general interest calculated to elevate and to strengthen weak minds and feeble understandings; and although the listeners to whom such conversation is addressed may at first be puzzled to comprehend and to respond intelligently to sensible talk, they will strive earnestly to do so, and will feel flattered and grateful to know that they are looked upon as reasoning and intellectual beings. Let them feel that they are reckoned able to become the compeers of men in common sense and intelligence, that they are regarded as being able to comprehend and respond to great thoughts and earnest words, and they will not long be content to waste their time in idle gossip about the latest French bonnet or the newest French novel. We never go into society without feeling insulted and degraded by the quality of the conversation addressed to young girls. We see statesmen, philosophers, and men of letters listening with apparent interest to and taking part in the most absurd and senseless twaddle, and even pouring into the ears of women (who are probably their equals intellectually) floods of nonsense, such as they would scorn to utter to the idiots of their own sex. Men alone can set these things right. If they will only show by their appreciation that a thorough mental training is more acceptable to them than a merely pretty face or graceful figure, women will not long be satisfied with beauty and superficial attainments alone. This-the pleasing of men-is, however, not the incentive we would hold out to women in favor of intellectual acquirements; for, although it is perfectly proper and natural that they should desire to be loved and admired by the opposite sex, it ought not to be this mo tive alone which should induce a broader and more thorough culture. The joy which a well-stored mind brings to its possessor should in itself be considered an ample reward for all the fatigue undergone in its acquisition. No woman of really cultivated mind and tastes can be altogether unhappy, for knowledge must ever be as a fountain of joy, and will bring with it its own exceeding great reward. Prettiness or an affectionate nature may charm for a season; but it is only the higher graces of mind and heart that will endure all changes of time and season, and grow brighter and more perfect as the years roll away. A woman. Bachenheimer is aelling Clothing cheaper than any other Clothing Store in the borThe Brick Question.

[The following communication came too later our last issue.] MESSRS EDITORS :- It has often been the source of great pain for us to note the great degeneracy of some of our philosophical savants, and we greatly feared that many of our most prominent writers would injure their brain by delving into the fathomless abyss of metaphysics and science, not content with that, which Providence has deemed sufficient for their welfare and actually necessary for the good of society. The world is moving at such a rapid rate now-a-days that we but glance at thel mighty ideas as they waltz along past us, and our minds are turned to something still greater.

Who would have thought so brilliant an idea would have flashed from the brain of "S" in last week's Sry: A man born on the classic hills of Georgetown, where he drank in the rich melody of the "killdeer andwhippoorwill,"whose scientific and wel balanced brain has given utterance to such noble thoughts, that they will ring through the present and on to "cradled ages" yet to come, giving to future generations benefits only equalled by Lancaster County's other Fulton," who has weighed (in their own scales) all the different species of fish that swim in our beautiful Susquehanna, taken the dimensions of a mosquito's eye, and the weight of its brain, who has pent many toilsome years endeavoring o find the connecting link between the ad pole and mankind, who has been looked up to, courted and flattered by all the great men of the day-for this man to descend from this enviable beight, and write a dissertation on bricks is disastrous o science and humiliating in the extreme o his many friends and fellow citizens. The article certainly tastes somewhat of J. B. " barring" the trace of vanity in including himself in the faculty, but Humboldt has done the same thing, and human nature is naturally weak, even our "Aggiscs" are liable to be influenced by the doctrines of itinerant mail and female preachers, such as visited our town a few evenings since, and momentarily permit themselves to be led astray by their strang flights of fancy and advanced ideas, that might revolutionize the world. But we feel proud of Columbia, proud of its energy, proud of its morality, proud of its beauty, but prouder yet of its intellect. Who would have believed that the true theory of the Earth's motion would have remained so long a mystery and that Columbia would produce an Engineer who could demonstrate it and show us how little our Forefathers knew; fortunate for them they are not here to feel their own ignorance-aye think of this huge globe travelling around an immense screw; (that's the theory) once every year; but horror of horrors where will we go when we are screwed off the top; what a field for Engineering and Surveying will we occupy as we float through the immensity of space without even as much as a comet's tail to steer by; but fear not, Yankee ingenuity, and Lancaster County brains will construct us a rudder and we'll stick to our own ship if we jam up every planet and star in the universe. Columbia should honor and respect her great men. Other cities are jealous of them and for our own honor and credit, we must foster and encourage them. I trust "S" will not think unkindly of me when I ask him not to listen any more to traveling female preachers-it draws his mind from its most useful channel and the central READER. world must be the sufferer. The men proceed a mile further west, to Colins' Station, where they stole a mule. One of the party was arrested near Harrisburg and the property recovered soon after. The Patriot of Saturday gives the followng particulars: "Two men, with a horse and mule were seen yesterday morning acting rather uspiciously on the farm of Hamilton Alricks, Esq., in Susquehanna township Mr. Brooks, tenant, who saw them, came o the conclusion that they were thieves and the animals stolen property. He communicated his suspicions to others, and in short time the constable and a number of citizens of the township proceeded to the place where Mr. Brooks had seen the suposed thieves. On arriving there they found that the spot had been vacated. They then followed the tracks of the horse and mule, and after traveling some distance came close to the fugitives, who, becoming alarmed at the proximity of their pursuers, jumped from their animals and took to their heels. One of their party (Frank Thomas), after running a short distance. surrendered. His associate, by superior management, effected his escape. Thomas was secured at the foot of the mountain. about five miles from here. Yesterday afternoon he was brought to the city and lodged in the prison. At the mayor's office he confessed having assisted in stealng the horse and mule, but said he was dupe of the escaped party. His age is about twenty and his regular occupation conting. He took his arrest very cooly and marched to prison as if he did not mind the turn matters had taken. The horse and mule await owners. The former was stolen at Bainbridge, and the latter near Collins' Station, along the canal, Lancaster county.

FATHER BECK .- Among the delegates in attendance at the Moravian Synod in this borough last week, was the venerable John Beck, familiary known as Father Beck, of Litiz, Lancaster county in this State. Mr. Beck is now seventy-nine years of age and has, for some time past, retired from active business life. He lives, in a measure, retired in his home in the beautiful and picuresque village fabove mentioned, respected and beloved by all within the range of his acquaintance. There is perhaps, at the present time, no man living in Pennsylvania who has exerted a larger amount of influence for good, or who has been practicaly more useful to the community than John Beck. He had charge of the Litiz Academy for over fifty years and during that time successfully stamped that popular institution with the impress of his own energy, piety and learning. He is in effect the father of it and although advancing years have induced him to retire to private ife, he still exerts a paternal care and influence over it and its surroundings. Mr. Beck has been a careful and patient student of history, science, literature and human character, and has acquired a vast fund of solid and practical information such as few men possess. Gifted with a most remarkable constitution, his intellec tual labors have covered a vast field of research and investigation, and, now at a ripe old age, his powers are measurably unimpaired. He is still a working man and is evidently determined to die with his harness on his back. All his life-time he has taken a most active interest in the success of Sabbath schools and in the advancement of the cause of the Redeemer of mankind, and now his attention is almost exclusively devoted to those nurnoses III still strong and musical voice is heard. wherever he goes in advocacy of those truths which lie at the foundation of hu man hopes and happiness both for this world and the world to come. He is speaker of rare gifts and power; when it is known in any neighborhood that Father Beck is to address a school or meeting, the people flock, for miles, to hear him. While in attendance at the Synod here, he addressed the Bethany Sabbath School Mission in North Duke street on Sunday morning, the 29th ult., and the Moravian Sabbath School in the Church, in the after noon of the same day, to the infinite delight and instruction of the children as well as a large audience of adults present on each args audience of audits present on each occasion.

We have written thus much of John Beek because we have known him since our boyhood, have frequently sat under the sound of his voice and his always wise and fatherly instructions, and have always looked upon him as a man of far more than ordinary power and ability. His eminent piety and blameless and unspotted character might be taken as a model and a guide ter might be taken as a model and a guide for the best of living men, and his earnest ness and energy profitably imitated by those who desire, in old age to enjoy the record of a well spent life.—True Democrat FRED'K BUCHER still continues to sell groceries and provisions at unusually low prices, at corner of Locust and Fourth sts It is still a mystery with the community how he can afford to sell good goods samazingly cheap; but Fred understands the business and he knows.
