The call for the meeting is signed by nearly two hundred republicans who, "believing that the prosperity of our country, and the comfort and happiness of her citizens are endangered by the free trade movement," and deprecating "the course which professed Republican journals in our midst are pursuing," invite their fellow citizens to meet in council to deliberate upon this all-important question. Let every republican voter be present on Monday evening.

Ann Arbor is an interior town in Michigan and has a population of a few thousand. As soon as our new town Hall is built the "Columbia Reading Room and Library association," or some lecture association will be able to make as creditable a financial exhibit as Ann Arbor. THE benefit of lectures and other en tertainments for charitable purposes was well exemplified in the published statement of Anna Dickinson's recent lecture in Saginaw for the benefit of the "Home for the Friendless" which showed that after paying that lady $200 for her services the Home realized a trifle over $10. "Benefit of Anna Dickinson" would have been the correct heading for an advertise ment. Anna claims to be the especial champion of the friendless and down-trodden of her sex, and this is the way she shows it. She will give them a benefit at any time for $200.

THE Indian Chiefs, about whom there has been so much huncombe, have left. Washington to return to their tribes. Congress voted a cool $50,000 to defray the expenses of their trip-rather expensive wards these Indians are. Besides, Spotted Tail had the cool impudence to ask for twenty horses to ride from some western railroad to his tribe. If the Indians were to restrain their tomahawk demonstrations a little, we would not seriously object. But ere many days we may expect serious raids and depradations on settlers in the Indian country.

THE more hostile Democrats become to the colored voters, the more marked is their affection for white Republicans. Their newspapers are filled with solicitations to come over, and vote with them. It is a little strange though that their hospitality ends here. They do not invite any one to come into their conventions to nominate tickets, nor do they propose to elect them to office. It seems to be the old story of the turkey and the crow. They don't talk turkey to the Republicans

MESSRS. George H. Richards and S. A. Bockius have been appointed to take the census of Columbia. We trust that our citizens will extend to them every facility for obtaining a correct exhibit of the wealth and prosperity, as well as the population of Columbia. Our population has been put down at ten thousand, and by some it is supposed that the census will show even higher figures. We await the result with some interest.

THE tariff is being made a leading issue in the pending political campaign in Missouri. The great natural advantages which Missouri enjoys for becoming a manufacturing and mining centre, its vast region unsurpassed on the continent for productiveness of iron of the best quality, its lead and coal mines will always make the State essentially protective.

THE remains of Charles Dickens were buried in Westminster Abbey on Tuesday. They were placed in the Poet's Corner, at the foot of Handel and at the head of Sheridan with McCauley and Cumberland on either side. Dean Stanley read the burial servive.

The Burial of Diokens.

Westmitister Abbey will doubtless be the scene of a mournful yet magnificent tribute to Charles Dickens. They will be fortunate who witness the imposing spectacle. The greatest city in the world will show to civilization England's affection for her greatest son. Her splendid nausoleum, originally founded in the year 610 by Sebert, King of the East Saxons, afterward destroyed by the Danes, and rebuilt in 958 by King Edgar, afterward enlarged by Edward the Confessor, in 1295, and finally reconstructed by Sir Christopher Wren, enshrines in all the glory of art the marble effigies and moniments of the monarchs of Great Britain, but there is only one prouder mental monarch within its aisles than Charles Dick-

As you pass through these regal chambers you grow weary of their silent occupants, most of whom "look life-like, yet neither breathe nor stir." You read the ages in monumental brass and sculptured stone. Edward the Confessor remarble robes; the Richards; the Henrys; the Edwards; the Jameses; the first and second Charles; the Georges; the hapless Mary, Queen of Scots; the Richmond who defeated Richard III. at Bosworth Field, and in his marriage united the rival houses of York and Lancaster with their queens, their courtiers, their soldiers and statesmen, are recalled, in metal or in alabaster, and sleep happily unconscious of the ostentation which strives to save them from oblivion.

More fortunate those who demand no storied urn or animated bust, and fill the smallest but the most sacred spot in the nighty sepulchre; Shakspeare, king of all these dead rulers, is leaning full-length against his pillar in the Poet's Corner Milton, with his lyre; rare Ben Jonson, with the double mask of Tragedy and Comedy; David Garrick, by a monument representing his great professional victories: with Addison, Cambell, Burns, Sam Johnson, Sheridan, Siddons, Walter Scott, with their associates and contemporaries. It would repay a visit across the ocean to see Charles Dickens added to this immortal company. That antique pile-"Where royal heads receive the sacre I gold; It gives them crowns and does their ashes keep; There made like gods, like mortals where they sleep;

He was the interpreter of the age of progress; an age of inventions; of revolutions in physical science and geography; of changes in governments; of innovations in religion; an age of facts, in which men look less to the oetry than the prose of life.

This eloquent testimony of the Philadelphia Press to the memory of Charles Dickens gives but a feint picture of the esteem in which he was held, and of the firm hold he had upon the people of this, as well as his native land. It surely is a fitting close to his distinguished career, that his remains were laid in Westminster Ahbey with the ashes of England's sainted

"Down with the woman doctors" was the rallying cry of the frightened M. Ds. at the late convention of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society in Philadelphia Dr. Atlee, of Philadelphia. demanded her grave and reverned doctors who had comfortably seated themselves, according to immemorial usage, to felicitate each other tioners, when the spectre appeared among

ceedings of this dignified body, says that when the demand for her admission to the rights and privileges of the profession was made, it was not known in what particular shape she was to come; whether fully chignoned and paniered cap-a-pie, or draped in the severe trowsers of our Florence sisters; but none the less did she strike terror and consternation to the souls of the good doctors. The young and bolder members vainly tried to rally them and persuade them at least to parley with the enemy. They fluttered together in wild confusion, like frightened hens, as though a hawk instead of a dove had entered the poultry-house. Day after day passed without restoring equanimity to their dismayed spirits. Vaccination, quacks, patent medicines, all were forgotten in this imminent peril. It is sad, indeed, to witness the discomfiture of such grave and ponderous dignity by so trivial a cause.

and to listen to their wild cries of alarm and prophecies of disaster. Unable to cope with the female doctor even in this shadowy presentation, they attacked with virulence those misguided men who had consulted with her, demanding that they should be thrust without the camp. "He that hath touched the unclean thing, let him beaccursed." "In what college was she graduated?" cries one feebly. "In what kind of Latin does she write her perscriptions?" "Can you purr?" said the hen to Anderson's Ugly Duck. "Can you lay eggs?" Then of what use are you in the world? For these hens always say 'We and the world,' knowing that they were half the world, and by far the better half." One old gentleman, his hair on end with nervousness, gives us a picture of the female doctor and the disasters that lie in her Juggernaut progress, which is indeed lamentable enough to make angels weep. But our alarm is more immediate. What shall be done to restore these grave and respectable gentlemen to calm and composure? If the mere shadow of the coming woman rendered them thus unfit to transact needful business when strengthened in conclave, what will they do when left to fight single the usurper who would thrust them from their buggies and victoriously mount their saddlebags? How can Doctors Bell and Hamilton clear their eyes to vaccinate Smith's child, or write a perscription in pure Latin for Mrs. Jones. "nerves," when this spectre in petticoats climbs the crupper, or nails her tin sign across the way, a prophetic hand-writing dreadful upon the wall as that which said Belshazzar, "Thy kingdom is taken from thee." Some one says that the first thing the Americans do when the death of a great man occurs, is to vote to build a mont ment, and the next thing they don't do is to build it. We recall this on seeing the statement that the work on the Lincoln monument, at Springfield, Illinois, will be completed so far as the funds now in the treasury will pay for before winter. This will cover the expense of the monument, the Lincoln'statue, and the United States coat-of-arms. About $55,000 more will be necessary for the groupe of war statuary. O'NEIL and his fellow Fenians crossed the line with sinister designs upon the British Lion. But as soon as they came across the Lion, it is a singular fact that they came across the line again in hotter haste than before. The Lion was a deal crosser than they expected to find him. O'N(eil)ly this and nothing more.-

ONE of the most popular fallacies in existence is the unerring accuracy with which the publishers of illustrated journals contrive to have a special artist on the scene of any important event, a lifelike picture of which is supposed to be presented to the public in a few days after. A new York paper of this class in its issue of last week represents the capture of the Fenian General O'Neil. The General is attired (in the picture) in a full suit of uniform, with top boots Kossuth hat and feather, and a huge sabre girded to his martial loins. The United States Marshal is represented holding a pistol to his head, and pushing him into a covered carriage, a clarence. How pleasing to all lovers of truth it is to know that General O'Neil's costume on the occasion was videly different from that represented by the special artist; that the countenance of the General is no more like that represented in the engraving than Parepa Rosa's is to that of the Empress Eugenie and, finally, that the close clarence was in reality an open buggy, devoid of the ap. pearance of a doctor's equipage.

Money spent in judicious advertising, by a man who knows how to strike when the iron is hot, is always a productive investment. Something after this sort is a little operation just achieved by the illustrious Tammany politician, Hon. Wm. H. Tweed, of New York city. We have Mr. Tweed's own word for it that he sent a man to Malone to gather together the defeated and destitute Fenians, supply them with food-and drink, also, we presumeand bring them home, all at Mr. Tweed's expense. A Voice of Warning!!-Address of Governor Geary-to the Freedmen of Pennsylvania, Fellow-Citizens! In tecelving the various testimonials of confidence which have been conferred upon me by the people of my native State, I am deeply sensible of the circumstance under which they have been bestowed, and of the corresponding duties and responsibilities imposed upor me during the fulfilment of my term of the Chief Executive office in your State Government. Notwithstanding a heart animated with pure and upright intentions toward the welfare of the Commonwealth. and with all the faculties allotted to me unceasingly devoted to its service, I feel deeply conscious that I stand in need of your indulgence, while I thus exercise one of the prerogatives of the position of Governor, to address the people when in his opinion he is justified by circumstances effecting their welfare and interests, and to expect from them an honest, candid and liberal support in return.

With such circumstances now before the people of Pennsylvania, I feel that I would be recreant to my duty, ungrateful would be recreased to my duty, ingratern to a generous people, and untrue to my self, if I should fail to express to you my opinions upon a subject of public concern, which demands from you immediate attention, and prompt, intelligent and independent action.

The inviolability of the Sinking Fund, by which our public debt is to be reduced.

The inviolability of the Sinking Fund, by which our public debt is to be reduced and finally extinguished, must be maintained against all attacks upon it, whether open or secret! A public debt is not a blessing but and evil!—an evil not to be measured by the amount of the direct pecuniary burden it imposes upon the people, but by its whole effect—the entire amount of all its consequences. These consequences have been pointed out so fully by the fathers of the republic, and by the most reliable writers upon political economy; and a conviction of them is so deeply impressed on the minds of all reflecting men, that I need not recapitulate them, nor insist even upon their existence. fortable sum, but immortality and the Irish vote of New York is cheap at double the money. ened by the recent war, but by the blessing of Heaven upon the patriotic efforts of the nation, the days of peace have returned. There can now be no excuse for diverting from that fund any of the moneys pledged to it by the Constitution and the laws, nor for tampering in any manner with its regular administration.

But it is known to you that a bold and daring attempt was made in the Legislature, during its last session, to invade the Treasury and seize the proceeds of the sale of the public works of the State, deposited there, in the Sinking Fund, for the use of certain affiliated corporations of this Commonwealth, and that attempt the use of certain affiliated corporations of this Commonwealth, and that attempt was defeated only by the interposition of the Executive veto. This was to me an ungracious and unpleasant task, to resist the majority in the Legislature composed of Senators and Representatives chosen by you, under the regular forms of the Constitution presumably for their intelligence and integrity; and it was inexpedient, perhaps, as a question of personal gence and integrity; and it was inexpedient, perhaps, as a question of personal interest and ease, that I should incur the hostility of powerful enemies by the course adopted. But I saw before me the open path of duty, pointed out by the clear words of the Constitution and by my oath of office; and I did not hesitate to treat the subject with the firmness and action which the urgency of the case required.

Borrowing time from the usual hours of rest, I was enabled, the next morning, to return the bill with my objections to the House in which it had originated. There its futher consideration originated. There its futher consideration was postponed, and no final judgment upon it was pronounced. It stands now among the open questions which may be revived at a future session. It may again be introduced and passed next winter or at any subsequent time, without embarrassment from any prior decision of either House against it. And if the membership of both Houses shall be so made up at any time that a two-thirds vote for the measure can be obtained in each its

An Executive veto is in the nature of an appeal to the people, to enable them to pass upon controverted questions involving grave considerations of public policy or safety. Upon a question of this kind, in which every man, woman and child in the Commonwealth is interested, this great prerogative of the Executive, conferred by the Constitution, should be fearlessly exercised. Is not this such an occasion? Is not the subject considered vitally important? Is it not urgent that you should determine it for yourselves, in the selection of men to represent you in the Legislature of 1871.

Be this as it may, this question is in the Legislature of 1871.

Be this as it may, this question is in fact submitted for your judgement. The issue upon it was distinctly and openly made at the last session between the Legislature and the Executive, and that issue is now before you for your arbitrament, and you should instruct your representatives, in each and every county, in accordance with your wishes and determination upon this important subject.

Should you, by your indifference to the question, or by a careless and uncalculating choice of the person to represent you in the Legislature, encourage and strengthen the combination of men who desire and threaten to invade your treasury, rest assured that the vast fund now sacredly devoted to the payment of the public debt will be seized and carried off.

The nine and a half millions of dollars of securities in that fund, with all the interest to accrue thereon, will be voted away from the people's treasury: the State credit will be prostrated; your taxes will be increased, and your Executive will be impotent to help you. The Living Machine. Injure the main spring of a watch and ever rtion of the works becomes disorderec. The man stomach is to the human system what that elastic piece of metal is to a chronometer. I influences the action of the other organs, and machine. The comparison may be carried fur ther: for as the weakness or other imperfection of the main swring is indicated on the face of the time-piece, so also is the weakness or other dis-orders of the stomach betrayed by the face of the invalid. The complexion is sallow or faded, the eyes are deficient in lustre and intelligence, and there is a worn anyious expression in the whole invalid. The complexion is sailow or faded, the eyes are deficient in lustre and intelligence, and there is a worn, anxious expression in the whole countenance which tells as plainly as written words could, do that the great nourishing organ whose office it is to minister to the wants of the body, and to sustain and renew all its parts, is not preforming its duty. It requires renovating and regulating, and to accomplish this end. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters may be truly said to be the one thing neadlut. The broken main spring of a watch may be replaced by a new one, but the Stomach can only be repaired and strengthened, and this is one of the objects of the famous vegetable restorative which for eighteen years has been waging a successful contest with dyspepsia in all climates. As a specific for indigestion its stands alone, when the resources of the pharmacopoela have been exhausted, without, at best, doing more than mitigating the complaint, a course of this wholesome and palatable, yet powerful, stomachic effects a perfect and permanent cure. In all cases of dyspepsia, this important gland, as well as upon the stomach and bowels, the Bitters act singular distinctness, regulating and reinvigorating every secretive and assimilating organ on which bodily and mental health depend.
