

A YANKEE IN A PRINTING OFFICE;

or
Jethro Jumper's Mashed Mind

Come in, said one of the operatives of the Abington Mashed Steam Job Printing Office of the National Clarion of Universal Liberty.

Come in, said the other, and in came part of the head, hair, hat, and shoulders of a good-natured, fair-looking, flax-head, rarely-raised specimen of mankind, in the raw state.

Come in, sir, repeated the aforesaid official.

What is up here? said the stranger.

The door slowly opened, and in came a good-natured, fair-looking, flax-head, rarely-raised specimen of mankind, in the raw state.

What is up here? said the stranger.

This is a printing office.

You don't say so?

Yes, sir; never in one before?

Never in one before?

What I reckon not?

Never?

Jem-ona no! Never in a printing shop, 'zactly; bin in a saw mill, cardin' factory.

What is the official of the printing office, 'got hurt some?

Got hurt some? Wal, cac'late I did git them two fingers smashed all to darned flinders, and that are you kin see, cut clean off.

A severe operation, I guess?

Severe operation, you guess?—Cac'late it wasn't anything else.

Ever in a cardin' mill? asked the stranger.

Never, I believe.

Ever in a saw mill?

O, yes, seen saw mills, said the printer.

Bin in a cotton mill, I reckon?

Never?

No.

Je-zu-sa-hum! Hain't bin round at all, mister. Ought to see a jinuine cotton mill—once!

I have no doubt they are some pumpkins, said the printer.

Some pumpkins? Shoo-o-o-o! I'll be darned if they haint! But what is all this about?

Type in case.

Thought them things were bird cages, chuck full of nests?

Oh, no, sir; apartments to distribute the type in.

Want to know! What is all this here about?

Oh, oh!—take care; that is type set up for books.

Set up for books? Got darn sich books as they are set for!

Be careful sir; see that, now; you have done mischief there!

Mischief, you say? Want to know now, if thar darn things all fall down in that sort of way, how on airth do you git them up agin'?

I'll show you, sir; There you see is A, B, C, &c.

And so fourth?

Yes, but be careful! There you go agin! You see you have done more damage by touchin' that matter.

What matter? Got darn if I teched no matter. But ho-o-oh! Now I have done it, shure! Hoid on to these darn types; they are all tumbling to everlasting smash, sartin'!

Sure enough, by grabbin' at a falling type, on a standing galley, the Yankee collapsed about one compositor's hard day's work, at a flap. The printer now got enough of this kind of fun, and, therefore, wished to cut the business short with the Yankee.

Sir, have you business with any one here?

Hev I?

Yes.

Broomcorn county, State of Connecticut.

To what am I indebted for this visit, sir? politely inquired the editor.

Not a god darn cent, to me, nofnow. I jest drapt in to see what was goin' on, an' a—hello! heev' on airth do you git ink into that queer fink?" said Jethro, screwing up the ink till it spurted all over any quantity of copy for the next day's paper.

"Ink and scissors!" at once exclaimed the startled and urbane editor.

"Sir, you have ruined me!"

"Git out, now; hev you go on about nothin'!"

"I wish you a good morning, sir."

"Eh? What?" says the Yankee.

"Go to thunder!"

"You be god darned! Cac'late you be a mighty big pumpkin. I cac'late gre-a-at squashes; you ain't nothin', nohow!"

Just then catching a glimpse of a quarto Webster coming at his head, the bore vacated the sanctum, and went down stairs ripping, until he came to the press room door, through which he bolted, and brought up standing by the double revolving press of the National Clarion of Universal Liberty, which being under a full head of steam, throwing off the largest circulation of any paper in the world, attracted Jethro's attention, amazin'.

"What in snakes you doin' on here?"

"Take care—look out!" bawled the greasy and black pressman, as Jethro thrust his head and hat under the fly.

"Murder! look!" bawls the Yankee, as the fly hits him a rap over the head.

"Take care—take care!" yells the pressman.

"Take it off—take it off!"

"Pull out your head, you fool, and stand back."

"Jumpin' Moses! Stop the machine till a feller git loose. Now git out my hat there, got darn you!"

"There—there it is—flat as a pancake; take it and slide."

Poor Jethro Jumper seized his well-mashed hat, and drawing it over his head, bolted down in double-quick time, yelling—

"Let me out! Want to kill a feller stun dead with your god darned, eternal, new-fangled cardin' mill and noospaper fixins."—N. Y. Dutchman.
