Temperance Meeting.

In pursuance of the call of the County Central Committee, one of the largest Temperance meetings ever assembled in the county, convened at the Court, House in the Borough of Coudersport, on Tuesday evening, the 21st February, 1854. The meeting was organized by appointing C. W. Ellis, Esq., Chairman, considered by others as leading men in and Lewis Mann as Secretary.

A Temperance Song was sung by the choir, after which the Chairman introduced Jacob Carter of Philadelphia, who gave a thrilling and brilliant sketch of the two sides of the question-portrayed in truthful colors the evils that follow in the train of the "Rum Traffic," and pointed to himself, as a living and breathing monument of what Total Ab stinence can do-may do-and had done.

The Chairman asked the meeting to contribute aid to Br. Carter in carrying forward his good work, which it did in a very substantial manner, in the sum of $19 50.

On motion, a vote was taken for and against a Prohibitory Liquor Law, which resulted unanimously in favor of such Remarks were made by several gentlemen and by the Chairman, who said that, since the meeting had declared so unanimously in favor of Prohibition he serious and weighty objections to such a Law. He saip it seemed to him that the house and into the room, where they if a Law should be enacted that should were celebrating their orgies. The pris-Instead of there being from ten to twenty cases of Assault and Battery, on the caldil hope the meeting would carefully and candidly consider this mater, and not go too fast.

On motion the Chair appointed H. J. Olmstell, Davil Brown, M. R. Gage, O. A. Lewis, and D. W. C. James "Central Committee" for the County the ensuing !

On motion, adjourned. C. W. ELLIS, Ch'n.

For the Journal.

History of a Night 50 Years Ago. Of all the causes that tended to promote intemperance fifty years ago, perhaps none were more prolific in evil consequences than the habits and examples of those called "Military men." It is well known that every able-boiled citizen between the ages of 15 and 45 was subject to perform military duty, which

A man who was in active life in those days informs me that he then lived in Broome county, N. Y., near the North line of it. Said he, "The country being new and sparcely settled, we had to go to Binghamton to attend regimental trainings, which was a distance of twentytwo miles. The soldiers many of them being poor, and the roads bad, we were compelled to perform the journey on foot. Consequently, by the time we had walked to Binghamton and been put through a hard day's drill, our physical strength would be nearly exhausted .-But, being anxious to get home, we wouldigenerally on being dismissed, start for home, and arrive at a place known as the Forks of the Chemung, where it was usual to stop for the night. Here weary and worn, a night's rest would be greatly eneded. Let me tell you how much we got. After supper some dozen of us were shown by the landlord into an upper room, and went to bed. Shortly a crowd collected in the room beneath us, for the purpose, as they said, of having a "Set down." A Chairman was chosen to preserve order, and several committees to perform the various business that was thought necessary. A large table was placed in the center of the room, set out with bottles of liquor and glasses, and the company were preparred for business, which would commence something in this way: A member gets up and says, 'Mr. Chairman, I move that the company be introduced to the Lion,' which being seconded, put, and carried, one of the committee would repair, singing a march, to where the company were seated, and taking one to the table, order him to Face to the right! Face to the left!' and then, 'Face the Lion!' which was the bottle of brandy, from which the committee would pour a full bumper which he must drink, and then be marched to his seat. So each member in succession must be put through the same ceremony, when the business of the evening would be fairly begun. Occasionly singing would be called for, when a kind of monotonous chant would be sung, the company keeping time with their fist upon the table. If some of the bottles and glasses would be jarred from the table and dashed on the floor, it seemed to give zest to the amusement. Reader, in order that you may understand what follows, I want you to bear in mind that this was a company, styling themselves gentlemen, consisting of field and company officers and others, comprising men who esteemed themselves, and were community. One of them, late in the night, moved for a committee to go out into the barroom for the purpose of ascertaining if the 'rowdies' drinking there were as drunk as 'we are here.' Carried, and committee appointed, which on its return reperted that they were not so drunk in the bar-room as 'we are.' Report not accepted, and committee sent back, who returned with the same report, which after a close poll was accepted. About this time, the landlord coming into our room, some of us asked him to quiet the the noise below, that we might get a little sleep. He went into their room and requested them to retire to rest; instead of which, however, they went into a yard and found a beetle with which they would strike up against the ceiling under us, and call for us to keep quiet for they could not sleep, &c. We then gave up the idea of sleeping in the house, and we got up and went into the barn, some getting on the mows and others on the floor. We were just congratulating ourselves that we had escaped from the noise, when the door opened and a deputation of the 'gentry' wished the privilege of urging a few arrived, as they said, looking for deserters. After a sharp contention we were compelled to get up and march off to

Towards morning, one of their num ber having absented himself, was hunted up, and cour: martfal organized, and he put upon trial, found guilty of desertion,

The fellow finally made his escape, his hair and clothes badly singed.

This performance ended the display for that time; and among other items in the bill for their night's amusement, if such it might be called, was one of fifteen dollars for damages done the house." Reader, now compare this statement with anything likely to occur at the present day among men occupying simiar positions in society, and answer us, has any improvement been made, and if so, to what is it to be attributed !
