

The Shame and Disgrace of America.

The principle of Liberty is as old as the universe and as sacred as Divine truth. All that is dear and great in this world, all that faith promises itself of blessedness in the next world, is identified with it. Liberty lost, and man is no longer an evidence of being the noblest work of his Creator. So said the inspiration of the poet more than three thousand years ago, so says every lyrical or inspired tongue at this moment, and so it will ever say. But this principle is denied to more than three millions of human beings in this country, which pretends to be the model republic, the asylum of the oppressed, the harbinger of a moral and material triumph yet unknown to history.

As painfully as we are impressed with the deep and barbarous wrongs attending the ordinary manifestations of Slavery, every now and then some single incident turns up which makes the system appear yet more inhuman, demoralizing and shameful. This may be the account of some cruelty—some lashing, burning—some hell throes of the kind which a Legree or other oligarch of the South inflicts on his mechanics and laborers whose skins are of African tinge, or, if as white as their master, of an outlawed blood. We believe, indeed, all these chivalric drawn distinctions of color to be a lie—a lie as deep as cruelty and deception could utter. When a mulatto child is born, and then still further the blood is diluted through successive generations, until the expert alone can tell the difference between the mixed blood and the pure—and the fire and ambition, and intellect of three or four white ancestors course in the veins of their descendant—and then that victim of concupiscence is hammered by the auctioneer from one master to another, it is false to say that the same sort of demerits who buy and sell such a human being, would not buy and sell one another if they could. The Grecian gentleman did so, and the gentleman of medieval Europe did so; all blessed with letters and arts; with the poetry of Homer, the statury of Phidias, the mathematics of Euclid, the architecture of Emanuel Steinbach. It is not mere culture which elevates man. There is something higher than that. It is a sentiment of justice, of the value of the golden rule, of the brotherhood of humanity.

Of the kind of incidents which startle the mind with a fresh sense of the enormity of Slavery, take the following handbill, of a kind which we suppose to be so rarely, at least in the more southern Slave States. It has been forwarded to us by a correspondent, and is strictly authentic:

"NEGRO DOGS. The undersigned respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has taken charge of the present year, and will give his undivided attention to the business of hunting and catching runaway negroes. Every call will be promptly attended to when I am not professionally engaged. Terms as follows:—
"Hunting per day, $5 00
"Catching runaways, 25 00
"INvariably cash on its equivalent.
Persons under the necessity of calling on me will please give me a fair showing at the trail, as I will be greatly to their interest to do so. And persons at a distance will have their business promptly attended to by forwarding a letter through the Post Office.
JOHN DEVREUX.
Marshall, (Texas) Feb. 11, 1854."

Our correspondent who dates from another town in the same State, says: "I send you herewith the professional card of one of our slave catchers. I would remark, by way of information, that the dogs spoken of are unusually severe. Not long since I saw a slave pass through the streets of this place who had been captured by a pack belonging here, and his raiment and dusky hide were ruptured and rent to a degree."
Now it is in vain for Union-Saving Committees, dough-faced white mechanics and laborers, or any of the cut-throat army at the North, to gloss over such facts as these. There stands the South—look at her! Virginia, the birth place of Washington, sunk to the level of a mere negro-breeding territory, and those slaves the most valuable that have the largest mixture of the blood of the first families. Gentlemen of Virginia are now engaged in rearing mulattoes to be sold and hunted by blood-hounds as above professionally advertised. A white ruffian buys slaves within a stone's throw of Mount Vernon or Monticello for a few hundred dollars, and then further south hires them out or employs them, living on their labor, taking their earnings from them by force like a cowardly footpad; disporting his aristocracy at the springs in the summer; and rejoicing in some shabby title of Major, Colonel or General—and this is American Democracy! This system, which is only upheld by one hundred and fifteen thousand slaveowners—the odd eight hundred thousand or one million of adult male whites in the South not owning slaves—must not only be accepted and approved by the mechanics and laborers of the North, but we must consent to and assist in its extension and perpetuation. It must be the shibboleth of all political enjoyment and aspiration; of present advantage and future glory.

We may boast of our liberty, but the echo comes wailing from the clank of slave-chains, the whistle of overseer whips, the rattle of flaming negro byres, and the howl of the blood-hounds hunting and catching men formed in God's image like ourselves. But this is not enough. This dark and shameful system is to be spread over 300,000,000 acres of virgin soil. So our Democratic Administration, so Mr. Douglas, Mr. Pierce, Mr. Toombs, Mr. Clayton and

Mr. Stephens will sit. So the dough-faced aspirants for the Presidency—or for the lower rewards thrown them by the chief magistrate and the negro driving majority of the Senate—will sit. In view of facts like these, what scathing sarcasm in the lines of the National Anthem!

"Hail Columbia, happy land! Hail ye heroes, heaven-born band! Who fought and bled in freedom's cause" when, seventy years after, "the peace your valor won," we return to the days of imperial Rome for models of cruelty matching the crucifixions of gladiators, in order to keep in bondage as many human beings as "the three millions armed in the holy cause of liberty" during the Revolution!

Northern Freemen! shall the vast territory of the North-west, once solemnly consecrated to FREEDOM FOREVER, be converted into a new range for the blood-hounds of future monsters like this John Devreux? This is not a question with which you have no concern. It is emphatically your question. It is for you to answer it, Yes, or No!—N. Y. Tribune.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD OPERATIONS.—The night connections on the underground railroad between this city and Canada are made by any of the small boats along the wharves to which the passengers take a fancy. On Friday night the second cutter of the revenue schooner Ingham was taken from its winter moorings by some half dozen able Southern gents who arrived by the above road; and who were so anxious to get into her Majesty's dominions that they never said "by your leave, sir." The boat has been recovered.—Detroit Free Press.
