From the N. Y. Tribune. THE TOCSIN.—Peal No. II. Itaws! how the joybells of the South
 Speak victory with brazen mouth !
 What formen have they slain ?
 What commerced monarch comes to day,
 Begirt by all this plumed array
 Of herce and weaponed men ? II Those joyletts! once I heard them ring When Britain's dull and savage King Loosed from our throat his grip. Then sabres gleaned-then rockets fell-And are they pealed once more to tell This victory of the whip ? III. III. Behold him in the centre there? The fettered image of despair, While reimd him redy flows. That "Chivalry," the Southron's boast-Aud on the flag that leads the host The name of "Freedom" glows! IV. Ay! lead him where the lilacs bloom round Mount Vernon's silent tomb-

(Green bo those trees and fresh!) And there; with oaths as fierce as deep, Salute the monidering tenant's sleep With bids for human flesh ! - V.

Who cares for Boston ! though her cry. Her wall of bitter agony. Through all the welkin swells? She dares not face our shotted gun We drown the murmur of her sous With shouts and clanging bells. VI.

No respite—no surcease of woe; And shall it be forever so? Was this the Pilgrim faith ? Shall Freedom's votaries still despair, And must the living North yet bear This voke with moral death ?

THE CZAR.

Geo. M. Dallas, late Vice President of the United States, and Minister to Russia, thus sketches the Czar:

"No admitted merit-no length of service-no elevation of rank can avert the blow with which he is ever ready to strike the culpable or disloyal. To maintain the discipline of his troops, he is in the habit of suddenly visiting their stations, without warning-when, wo to the officer or private then detected in fault! He has been known, on the instant of discovering remissness or inattention, to physiognomy. These revels in his temperament are what may be called a dash of romance. which, set off by a form of great elegance and muscular strength, give to actions grace, vivacity, and interest. When representing the imperial chief. his details of grandeur and magnifimay be truly and orientally gorgeous -his audiences, banquets, and festivals as imposing and dramatic as those in the Arabian Nights-yet often from them he breaks abruptly away-travels through his kingdom, unknown and imobserved; gaining, perhaps, admission to the palace of some neighboring sovereign, under a fictitious name: or. as a mendic at by the wayside, claims charity of his Empress-or, it may be. as an awkward captain of a steamer, affects to run down some lubbering captain of a small craft in the Balticand, while supposed to be thus roam-ing over the Empire, älarms his min-isters by suddenly presenting himself amongst them. After inspecting this proud specimen of our naval architecture and armament, the splendid cavalcade reentered their barge. And now arrived the moment when the commodore was to decide whether he should give the ordinary salute of twenty-one guns, or twice that number, consti-tuting an imporial salute. The sus-ever blow pected coxswain was then observed, alone, and leaning on the wheel of the steamer, as the man-of-war's heavy cannon thundered from her ports. He remained silent and stationary until, at the sound of the twenty-second gun, he started with surprise, gathered his officers around him, and after he had explained to them that the 'cute Yankees' had seen through the disguise, he issued his orders for the resumption of his true character, signals were immediately noticed to be exchanged with the surrounding forts, and ten or twelve Russian ships in the harbor. The star-spangled banner was then hoisted at the mast-head of the steamer, gracefully playing across the bows of the American ship, while every other vessel commenced firing answering salutes. When these ceased, the flag of the Union slowly descended, and NICHOLAS proclaimed his real presence by hoisting in its stead the standard of his house-the dark doubleheaded eagle on a yellow groundwhose appearance, as if by magic, awoke the cannon on both the shore. and the bay, producing the deafening roar of two thousand guns. The self confidence which leads to those eccentric movements characterizes his deportment everywhere and at all times. Our fancies are apt to imagine him always moving in state, and hedging himself around with guards and attendants, with all the show and pomp of the appurtenances of tyranny. Such is not the case. Why, the elected citizen, the Emperor of France, with powers expressly defined and restricted, feels safe only within his palace walls, or surrounded by his soldiers, whilst Nicholas, the unrestricted and irresponsible despot, maintains, in all his intercourse with his people, the freedom and carelessness of unimportant privacy. He is seen at all hours, in a small, single-horse sleigh, in an open earriage, or on horseback, or on foot, unaccompanied and undistinguished except by those familiar with his general personal appearance or ware of his presence, pass him with-

WARLIKE PREPARATIONS.

A late scientific journal of France notices the wonderful increase of warlike weapons and means of defence, which owe their origin to the present struggle in eastern Europe. A triple bored cannon projects, with a single charge of powder, three balls connectod by chains, which now down rank after rank, and even the masts of ships and smoke-stacks of steamers. A learned saran of Paris has discovered a liquid which spreads over the surface of water, and spontaneously inflames, thereby destroying vessels and human life. A cunning artisan has concocted a balloon, which by the guiding influence of a cord, and the three years ago.
