We don't like stinginess. We don't like "ecoromy," when it comes down to rage and starvation. We have no sympathy with the notion that the poor man should hitch himself to a post and stand still, while the rest of the world moves forward. It is no man's duty to deny himself every amnsement, every recreation, every comfort, that he may get rich. It is no man's duty to make an iceberg of himself-to shut his eyes and ears to the sufferings of his fellows-and to my himself the enjoyment that re-its from generous actions-merely out he may hoard wealth for his heirs to quarrel about.

But there is yet an economy which is every man's duty, and which is especially commendable in the man who struggles with poverty-an seconomy which is consistent with happiness and which must be practiced, if the poor man would secure independence.

It is almost every man's privilege, and it becomes his duty, to live within his means; not up to, but within them. Wealth does not make the man, we admit, and should never be taken into account in our judgement of men. But competence should always be secured when it can be; and it almost always can be, by the practice of economy and self-denial to only a tolerable extent. It should be secured, not so much for others to look upon, or to raise us in the estimation of others, as to secure the consciousness of independence, and the constant satisfaction which is derived from its acquirement and possession.

· We would like to impress this single fact upon the mind of every laboring man who may, peruse this short article-that it is possible for him to rise above poverty; and that the path of independence, though beset with toil and self-sacrifices, is much pleasanter to the traveler, than any he can enter upon. The man who feels that he is earning something more than he is spending, will walk the staeets with a much lighter heart, and enter his home with a much more cheerful countenance, than he who spends as he goes, nance, than he who spends as he goes, or falls gradually behind his necessi-ties in acquiring the means of meeting them. Next to the slavery of intem-perance, there is no slavery on earth more galling than that of poverty indebtedness. The man who is everybody's slave, is in a much worse condition than he who serves a single master.

There was conse-quently a great inferiority on the part of the American vessel in point of metal and men. Neveraheles, Barney sailed in a week, hav-ing disguised his vessel as a merchantman. He commanded the erew, that when he should order them to board, they should not countenance, and given us annually recurring proofs of their esteem and attachment, unin-thenced by the fluctuations of party opinion, or the smiles and frowns of men in power, which too often seduce or frighten men from the course their consciences approve - the manly assertion of truth and steady resistance of error. We take fresh courage from our su cess thus far, and from their friendly coöperation, to persevere in the path which we have deliberately chosen, and they have as deliberately approved. We avail ourselves of this occasion to con-gratulate our readers upon the arrangement which we have been so fortunate as to make with Colonel Benton for the publication of a series of articles from his "Thirty Years in the United States Senate," which will be continued through the year and until the work shull be published, some time in 1854. -----THE PRINCIPLES OF AGRICULTURE

It is an encouraging fact, that the elements of scientific agriculture are now being studied by our intelligent farmers and they in turn become the instructors of their sons. When the day shall have arrived, in which is parent shall reflect upon his true po-sition, he will discover that himself alone, is the only natural and legiti-parts. It is an encouraging fact, that the mate teacher of his own children. Then will that superficiality of knowlour present primary school system, become entirely unknown, and vigorous intellectual and bodily powers be moulded by parental care. The farmer must educate his children theoretically and practically, if he desires that they shall be farmers, and must impress upon their minds the necessity of studying agricultural science if hey would largely reap the benefit of a true investigation of its principles. A boy of the commonest capacity will readily understand that a bushel of wheat will not grow from nothing. A i. mel of wheat must be composed of connething; thence arises the question what is something? When this is discovered the mystery is solved; and we know what fertilizer is needed to ensure the heaviest yield. Just as in the human system, the components of , the anatomy and physical being known, by a chemical analysis of the various articles of diet, we can certainly dis. gover the proper contributives to health and long life.
