

schadnezar's image. Peter and I were forbidden to teach in the name of Christ, but chose to obey God rather than man. And we come down from the altar when England enacted her colonial subjects must not bear the government stamp, which to write or print all bonds, orders of land, marriage certificates, in order to render the transaction void. These they must buy of the government at ten shillings a stamp. The government further enacted that all duties should pay three pence on the pound of tea that should be received.

These laws were thought by the colonists to be oppressive and unjust. A human, personal liberty was a price of obedience; although a servitude would not result from compliance, nothing but merely the compliance of the pecuniary value of a stamp and three pence on the pound of tea was at stake, they could not do it. If their disobedience was just, a disobedience which related to a pecuniary interest, what shall we say of a disobedience to a law, or to a government that strikes down the image of God in the soul, and makes all sons of justice and peace, and obliterates all the feelings and higher sentiments of the human mind? In one case disobedience is a crime, and praiseworthy, in the other it becomes a virtue. Yet, the submission to such a law would be a wicked offense against God and man.

The undersigned, Trustees of the Coudersport Academy, are moved by a sense of official and personal duty to invite the attention of the public—of parents in particular, to the rising and useful character of this institution of learning. When invited, a little more than a year ago, to the superintendence of its affairs, we found it depressed and declining. We requested Mr. J. Bloomington to become its Principal Teacher, and trusted to his discretion and management. By the aid of his own talents, and the assistance of a few friends, he has proved him to be a faithful, efficient, and successful instructor in this college. The number of pupils in the school is now over sixty. We refer to Mr. Bloomington's advertisement for information as to the terms and conditions on which pupils are admitted, and for other facts of interest; and recommend the institution to the patronage of the people.

War Declared at Last.
THE long repose of Europe is about to be disturbed by the long and the recital of the drum, calling its shambles millions to arms. In the decline of their friendships and their country, England and France are calling for men and means, and sending forward their armies to battle against the aggressions of the Russian Bear; but while the Old World is convulsed by revolution, mutual peace and plenty reign in the New.
