

the process, leaving $650,153 of this unsightly currency in circulation. In the spring of 1853, the policy of cancellation was again resumed; and up to this date, $465,384 63 had been received into a sinking fund, applicable to that purpose, leaving the meager sum of $184,772 12 to provide for. The gratifying fact is, however, that, without any further legislation on this subject, the entire outstanding balance of paper notes can be withdrawn from circulation and destroyed during the current year. It is true that these issues have not come into the Treasury as rapidly as the funds for their cancellation have accumulated, and, consequently, a portion of the receipts have not been invested; but this difficulty will be obviated in time next, when the law will go into operation which forbids the banks and receiving officers of the Commonwealth to pay out these issues, and requires them to present at the Treasury for cancellation. We shall, therefore, soon see the last of a currency which has polluted the channels of circulation for thirteen years past; and it is to be hoped that this lesson has been taught in time sufficient to warn against similar errors for all time to come.

My opinions on all questions that concern the currency, have been so often expressed, that they must be well known to the Legislature, and need not be given at length, in this communication. Without any time-consuming discussion, it would be wise for this State, regardless of the policy of other Commonwealths, to disengage itself entirely and completely from the issue of banking capital as a basis for paper currency, should be closely limited to the urgent wants of commerce and trade. If the experience of the country is worth anything at all, it has demonstrated the correctness of this policy, and the use of small bank notes should be discouraged and forbidden. In accordance with this view of the subject, I have, on past occasions, refused to sanction any extensive increase of banking capital.

Every commercial country is liable to alter its currency, and it is not an exaggeration to say that the history of the world is a history of periods of extravagant over-trading, followed by ruinous revolutions. The reaction now felt is the inevitable, if not the natural counterpart of an undue expansion of credit, the result of paper money, and the consequent depreciation of the value of the currency. In those States where the free, or stock-bank system has stimulated the expansion of the workings of the reaction have been disastrous. In our own beloved Commonwealth the shock has been sensibly felt, though for less severe than in other parts of the country. Her paper currency, it is believed, is owing to her present and restrictive policy in the use of bank credit. It is, at least, very clear, that had the free, or stock-bank plan, at one time so zealously advocated, been adopted in this State, or had our present system been greatly expanded, the position of affairs in our commercial metropolis would not have been so favorable as at present. Had the same tendency to speculation received this artificial stimulus—the limits of safety, like the lessons of experience, would have been passed unheeded; as it is, some good men, in the pursuit of useful enterprises, have been prostrated. It is most unfortunate, that under this influence, all must suffer alike. Those who profit least by the expansion, are often affected most by the contraction. This is especially the case with labor, which is uniformly the last to be elevated in times of prosperity, and the first to go down in times of depression. The banks, as a general rule, make the most out of these convulsions. It is often their error to flatter the merchant and trader when the tide of prosperity runs high, and to forsake him on the first appearance of the ebb. Even savings banks, and of good repute, it is said, are seeking to make money out of the present crisis by sharing their capital and its benefits with brokers and jobbers, instead of aiding the business community at large, who are in need of these allegations are warranted, it is difficult to decide; but it is to be hoped that few, if any of our banks are justly liable to this charge, for such a practice would be highly improper, and well calculated to excite discontent. Such a departure from legitimate business would demand a prompt remedy at your hands. It may be difficult to convince these institutions to their proper business, with the prospect of better results in other directions; but they should be made to feel that they have been created for a higher purpose than merely to enrich the stockholders.

In accordance with the provisions of a law passed in April last, a vote of the people was taken, at the October election, on the policy of prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors: 102,312 votes were cast in favor of the measure, and 103,510 votes against it.

The proper regulation of this subject greatly concerns the moral welfare of the people, and for that reason will claim your anxious consideration. Perhaps no other moral question within the range of your authority, so deeply interests the people of every rank, race, and condition. Indeed, the immoderate use of intoxicating drinks is an evil that has left its fatal track in every vicinage. Its progress, fortunately, has been steadily resisted by individuals and societies, who have employed the power of truth and reason against it. These efforts have done much, and may do more hereafter to mitigate the evil. Avoiding all vituperative invectives upon the rights and privileges of every citizen, the law is clearly no reason why the influence of a well devised law regulating and restraining the sale of intoxicating liquors, should not be brought to the aid of these individual efforts. Although the vote of the people would seem to indicate their aversion to the particular measure of reform proposed, it is not to be inferred, for that reason, they are averse to all attempts at reformation. Such an inference is a gross error, and would not be a true reflection of their sentiments. So far from this, they fully acknowledge the existence of the evil, and the necessity of proper remedies. Our present laws, in this regard, are, in my opinion, to be justly revised—the object of such revision being to lessen the vice of intemperance. That these laws need such a revision, is beyond all doubt. So far as relates to the city of Philadelphia, they are peculiarly prejudicial to public morals, and seem to have been constructed to promote the convenience of drink-ers, far more than to restrain its evil consequences. The subject is worthy your early and deliberate consideration.

The report of the Superintendent will exhibit to you in detail, the operations of the Common School system for the year just closed; and I respectfully recommend the suggestions of that officer to your careful consideration.

The general law of 1843, with amendments and modifications, was re-modeled by the last Legislature. The most material parts of the old law, which were omitted in the new, were the sub-district, the endowment, and certain features. The former was rejected, because of the unnecessary multiplication of offices which it authorized, and the conflict which it necessarily drew between the committee and directors; and the latter, because in manifest hostility to the true intent of the common school system. These provisions, which seemed to contemplate a separate school establishment, under sectarian patronage, although controlled by the common school directors, were originally suggested upon the acts of 1836 and 1838, and were again re-enacted in 1849. They were very properly stricken from the system by the law of last session. Should efforts be made in the future, to reintroduce similar provisions, it may, it is hoped they may be promptly rejected.

The system, to be effectual, must be simple and uniform in its operations. Special legislation, inconsistent with the general law, applicable to particular localities or districts, to answer temporary or partial ends, always has, and always will embarrass the administration of the general system, and should for this reason be carefully avoided. The integrity of its forms, not less than the means to sustain its operations, should be constantly maintained, and sacredly cherished by the government.

A new feature in the system, adopted in the law of last session, creating the office of County Superintendent, has not, as yet, been fairly tested; and there evidently exists some diversity of opinion as to the wisdom of the provisions. It is already very obvious, at least, that its beneficial workings must depend mainly upon the character of the agents selected to carry it into operation. Competent and faithful Superintendents may produce the happiest results; whilst the agency of the ignorant or ineffectual will be attended by the reverse consequences. In order to give this new feature of the law a fair trial, it will be necessary, therefore, for the directors, in the respective counties, to select Superintendents with sole reference to their adaptation to the duties of the station.
