TRACHING READING.

This is one of the principal branches, if not the principal brauch which our Teachers are called upon to teach. Our attention was directed to this subject, while attending the Convention in Potter Co.. by hearing the remarks made by Teachers and others interested in the cause of Education. We propose to embody a few of these remarks, together with some of our own ideas in reference to this branch, for the purpose of encouraging a spirit of inquiry and thought upon this very important branch of Education .-We are led to do this, from the fact that so many of our Teachers seem to consider this part of their duty of minor importance.

Teaching reading has properly two departments; first, the mechanical execution, or the art of calling words right and rapidly; and second, to inspire the love of reading in the mind of the pupil. The one, of course, is dependent upon the other, as no scholar can long possess a love for reading, without becoming familiar enough with words, to be enabled to call them right and rapidly; and on the other hand, if he has this skill, a very little effort on the part of the Teacher, will give him the other.

We shall speak first of teaching the mechanical execution, although that, of course, should not be done, without being closely comected with the other.

The first, and usually the most tedious duty which the Teacher has to perform, is to impress upon the mind of the young pupil, the names and characteristic features of twenty-six little fellows, 'yelept the Alphabet. True, there are some parents, who have compassion enough on the Teacher to relieve him of this task. Then come the weeks spent upon b-a ba, b-e be, b-i bi, &c., during all the time of which the pupil has not obtained a single idea, save that going to school is an irksome and withal, a very disagreeable task. After doing penance for a sufficient longth of time upon this department, he is luitiated into the mysteries of spelling, and is allowed to read where there is a probability of gaining some clue to an idea, which probability, alas, is too often not discovered by the Teacher.

It is no very great wonder that the scholar who has passed through all this, has conceived a dislike to school, which after years will hardly eradicate. There is a radical fault in the whole system, as usually pursued, The query is, How shall it be remedied? Teachers, will you think of this? We have not room in the present article to give our plan, but will do so hereafter. Meanwhile, we should be glad to hear your plans, and give them to those interested.—M. Kean Cit-

Potatoes-(these most indispensable serwants to all dinner-eating Americans, and the benevolent furnishers of "daily bread," and indeed the whole living to Pat-land's poor,) Potatoes are weeping with all their "eyes," at the agony at which they are put by thousands. They are most unfeelingly mangled, top and toe, in this manner-TATERS. Notwithstanding their extremities, in the most "mealy" man hed manner, they exclaim, Po! Po! gentlemen and ladies! pray spare us a head, and you may bruise our toes in welcome, still you must confess that POTATERS is not so sound and whole-some as POTATOES.

. Point-allows that in some respects he is of very minute importance; but asserts that in others he is of the greatest consequence, as in arguments, for instance. He is, in zeal, the sharpest of all those who have entered into the present subject of amelioration .-Point is determined to prick forward in the cause, till he shall be no longer blunted and turned away from his aim, and robbed in his very nature, in the measure you here percieve-Pixr. RATHER—is universally known to be very nice in his preferences, and to be almost continually occupied in expressing them. Be it as universally known, then, that he is disgusted beyond all bearing at being called-RUTHER. O, how from time immemorial has this choice character suffered 'from the interference of Ü, ye masters!

SAUCE-has a good many elements in him. and above all, a proper share of self-respect. He thinks he has too much spice and spirit to be considered such a flat as this indicates-

SAUCER-complains that he is served the mame sass. Between them both, unless there is something done, there may be an overflow of sauciness to their masters.

Scance-is not a very frequent complainant of any thing, but he is now constrained to come forward and pour out more plentifully than common. He complains that certain Nippies, both male and female, and hosts of honest imitators, call him Scurce, thinking it the very tip of gentility. He will detain you no longer, gentlemen and ladies, for he pre fers to be always—Scance.

LIVE FOR SOMETHING.

Thousands of men breath, move, and live-pass off the stage of life and are heard of no more. Why? None were blessed by them, none could point to them as the means of their redemption, not a line they wrote, they were not remembered more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die. O! man immortal? Live for something. Do good and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of time can never destroy, write your name by kindness, love, and mercy on the hearts of thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will not be forgotten. No; your name, your deeds will be as legible on the beart you leave behind as the stars on the brow of the evening. Great deeds will shine us brightly on the earth as the days of housest.
