

For the Journal: A DAY OF SPRING.

BY MRS. D. S. HARRIS.

A gush of melody rings through the forest bowers: Bung ever robins sweeter note—sweet guests of ours! Oh, Earth! our God-given Earth! how fair art thou to-day, Though still the song-birds rest upon a leafless spray.

The little children, those dear, loving birds of home, Are warbling merrily, "The Spring, bright Spring has come." They pluck from hill and vale, the wild flowers' tiny cup, While evergreens and mosses rich are hoarded up.

The soft, warm air steals lovingly into the sick one's room, And to her thin, pale cheek woos back the rose's bloom; Hope's buds, so winter-chilled they seemed all dead and ere, Start into life with the young blossoms of the year.

Thank God for Spring! Oh! weary heart, A comes to thee, With precious leaves from off Life's ever-healing tree; Turn to thy open door, from weary cares away; Come, lean on Nature's breast, and be a child to-day.

So shall this Love, that through the long, cold winter hour, Held tresser watch o'er sleeping germ of leaf and flower, That fills our waking groves with birds of joyous wing, Give to thy grateful soul the melody of Spring.

GRUMBING AT ADVERTISEMENTS.—The following sensible remarks we clip from the Columbus Statesman:—Men, at times, are very unreasonable, and often practice one thing and preach another. For example, a farmer has beef, corn and tobacco to sell. Should a purchaser wish to buy his beef without the bone, the corn without the cob, or the tobacco without the stem, and this without paying an extra price over the regular terms, the farmer very properly regards the proposition as outrageous, and sells the bone as well as the beef, and thinks it right, as a truth it is; and yet we constantly find them grumbling at newspaper publishers for refusing to do it.

Owners of newspapers refuse to sell corn without the cob, and beef without the bone unless an extra price is paid, — i. e., they refuse to publish a newspaper without advertisements. In doing this they only do what their readers practice in all matters of business of analogous character.

Therefore when a man complains to us for having advertisements in our paper, and expresses a wish that they may be taken out, and reading matter substituted, we avow our perfect willingness to second his wishes on the paying of an extra price. To ask us to exclude all advertisements from our columns, and to sell our paper at present prices, would be as unreasonable as to ask one of our farmers to sell us beef without the bone, at five cents per pound, while everybody else was selling both together at that sum. Do you see?

In short, that is the question. Will you have a paper with no advertisements, or no paper at all? This is the true issue. The bones as well as the beef, or nothing, for a paper could be no more sustained without advertisements than a farmer could raise a crop without soil. With these few thoughts for a text, every one of our readers can make a sensible sermon on this subject.

MAKING PRESIDENTS.

The New York Crusader, under the above head, gives notice that it will hoist the name of no Presidential candidate for the American party, before an open organization makes it. So far as the open nomination goes, we are with the Crusader; although we reserve the privilege of naming any man, in connection with such nomination, as we think will best subserve the interests of the country and is best qualified to administer the government upon the pure principles of American Republicanism. Our first choice will not be the nominee of the grand Know-Nothing Council, as has been falsely asserted by the organ of the sham democracy of this country. The next President must be made, not by a few political demagogues, nor by a secret caucus, but by the AMERICAN PEOPLE, in an open National Convention, composed of delegates chosen by an open organization, such as the truest and ablest exponent of Americanism have always advocated. The time is now come when the American party must divest itself of the obscurity which has in a measure surrounded it, and in the bold sunlight of heaven proclaim its principles to the world, and unfurl its banner to the breeze of enlightened public opinion, trusting to the purity and patriotism of those principles to carry the banner in triumph throughout the length and breadth of our land.—True American.

It is impossible for men to live in the world without poetry of some sort or other. If they cannot get the best, they will get some substitute for it. But there is as much poetry as ever in the world, if we only know how to find it, and as much imagination, perhaps, only that it takes a more prosaic direction. Every man who meets with misfortune, who is stripped of his material prosperity, finds that he has a little outlying mountain-farm of imagination, which did not appear in the schedule of his effects, on which his spirit is able to keep itself alive, though he never thought of it while he was fortunate. Job turns out to be a great poet as soon as his flocks and herds are taken away from him.—James Russell Lowell.

WHERE DID HE COME FROM. When Philip Henry sought the hand of the only daughter and heiress of Mr. Matthews in marriage, an objection was made by the father, who admitted that he was a gentleman and a scholar, and an excellent preacher, but he was a stranger, and "they did not even know where he came from." "True," said the daughter, who had well weighed the excellent qualities and graces of the stranger, "but I know where he is going." How different would be the world's estimate of men, if they were judged less by their origin and more by their destiny.

War Declared at Last. THE long repose of Europe is about to be disturbed by the bugle's note and the revolve of the drum, calling its slumbering millions to arms in the defense of their flag and their country. England and France are calling for men and means, and sending forward their armies to battle against the aggressions of the Russian Bear; but while the Old World is convulsed by revolution, annual peace and plenty reign in the New.

In the peaceful and quiet pursuit of our business we have formed a copartnership under the name and style of N. S. BUTLER & CO., and have taken the store in Empire Block, in the village of Olean, formerly occupied by Thib & Brother, and are now receiving a splendid stock of goods adapted to the season and wants of the community, which we intend to sell exclusively for cash, down at prices that will cause consternation and dismay in the ranks of old fogies that has been so long established in this section. Our stock will consist in part of the following Goods:

We refer to "Dr. Curtis' Hygeana," an Inhaled Hygean Vapor and Cherry Syrup." With this new method Dr. C. has restored many afflicted ones to perfect health; as an evidence of which he has innumerable certificates. Speaking of the treatment a physician says: "It is evident that inhaling—constantly breathing an agreeable, healing vapor, the medicinal properties must come in direct contact with the whole of the nasal cavity of the lungs, and thus escape the many and varied changes produced upon them when introduced into the stomach, and subjected to the process of digestion. The Hygeana is for sale at the druggists' through out the country. N. Y. Dutchman, Jan. 14.

The Inhaler is worn on the breast under the linen, without the least inconvenience—the heat of the body being sufficient to evaporate the fluid.
