Putnam's Monthly,

In assuming the publication of PUTNAN's MONTHLY, it is only necessary for us to refer to the special notice issued, with our hearty approval, upon the first of April, by the late publishers. The Magazine will aim at greater excellence in the direction hitherto pursued; and, without being a partisan, will hold de-cided opinions, and will treat all public ques-tions from a huring and truly mitional point tions from a humane and truly national point In all the other varied departments of a Monthly Magazine, it will hope to amuse, instruct, and benefit; to criticise generously but justly; and to attract to its pages, as it has already done, the contributious of able men in every walk of Literature, Science, and Art. The past volumes are the best assurance that nothing offensive to the purest morality, and no wanton attack upon honest conviction will ever find a place in the Magazine.
