

For the Journal.
Another morning, beautiful and has dawned upon the world; far, far above the moving do I with solemn tread beat the march of Time. A few and the inhabitants of this village over which I look, in silence and repose, the sound of my prophetic voice has broken upon the stillness, and I have seen many weary watches of my life; but if in my here there is aught of good, these sorrowing ones, whom I cover not as with a garment, whose anxious spirit I speak of cheer through the long, lone of the night, pointing them, with every beating pulse I tell, to the country where sickness and death are as a day."
A little while, by way of di-I will amuse myself watching smokes as they gracefully from the housetops, and fancy to the diversity in the lives of respective inmates. As I look to the east, far in the distance, in the beautiful sunlight of the early morning, gratefully rise the smokes from the dwellings of the humble of him, who go cheerfully and to their labor, thankful to have a home in "Ameriky." In near do they proudly rise from mansions of recent growth modern style, upon whose elegant I love to gaze, where are well adorned with those elegancies that wealth and afford—whose inmates know of corroding care or crushing over whose threshold the doing angel has never crossed, and in the joy and sunlight of home, that over each one on earth, and the cot, hangs unseen a dark cloud. Yonder the thrifty merchant, who has with the sun, and who thinks not of the irksome toil of the day, if he may but put a rich increase in the trunk he carries so lovingly under his arm. How often indeed his wealth be said to own a man instead of he it! From my South, the fine fields and noble hills in the distance. The river runs as peacefully when its course was first chiseled through the valley, and the great rapids made its waters flow, regardless of the mutations of time upon all around, content in fulfilling its own mission. The dew upon the leaves near the dwellings upon its bank, in the sunbeams; but the kind and that first nurtured them, lies peaceful in the grave. Truly, "man teth a vineyard, but eateth not the grapes thereof."
There, the stage is ready for departure. "Mine host of the inn" walks majestically to and fro upon the piazza, as he proudly surveys his fine establishment, and bows a good morning to all aboard, wondering if it will return laden with weary travelers, to whom his house is as a cooling spring in the desert to refresh and cheer.
From my West, I have a fine view of the lofty range of mountains in the background, and also of the great part of the town. Nearly every man at his post, content with honest industry and lawful gain. There comes a young "limb of the law," leisurely strolling down from his boarding house, puffing a cigar; whether by its he wishes to aid the digestion of his morning meal, or enhance the interest of his appearance, I know not.
There, too, goes the faithful apprentice early to his work; years hence, and the world will be the better for his having lived in it. Among the many passers-by I discern one who walks among men, but whose name is written upon his forehead, and upon whom retributive justice will surely fall—who will yet know that "justice and judgment are the habitation of God's throne." Far away upon the North lie many beautiful houses, and methinks happy spirits within; but of the joys and sorrows, hopes and fears that lie hidden in the depths of every human bosom within my observation, I can only guess. It has now reached the hour of noon. Busy wives are preparing the favorite dish for the (shall I say busier?) husband. Noisy children are running home from school, thinking more of their dinner and play than of the use of nouns and verbs. One little truant boy has just cast a look at my big, bright face, and from the way he runs, must have received some hurrying information.

The afternoon, with monotonous tick, tick, has passed away, and the little world of life below me is astir, to seek rest and recreation in the cool shades of evening. A few friends are now seated quietly in a parlor near, while the solemn prayer ascends to Heaven for blessings upon those whom the marriage tie has just united, whose rows are registered there, together to share life's weal and woe until the "golden bowl is broken."
Night has again enfolded me in her curtain of sable hue; but the darkness without has no power to stop the workings of the life within me. In sunshine and storm I cease not my labor of love and duty, and warn those around me of the rapid flight of Time, of its priceless value, of its untold worth when rightly improved, and the bitter, bitter sorrows caused by its misuse. Like many who are wiser, I have sometimes indulged in a feeling of discontent, that I had not been honored by a higher position in some great city, where thousands might look upon me with profit, and listen to my 'striking' with delight. A little reflection upon my origin, and the mystery of my own existence, together with strange words I have now and then heard from my neighbors below, has quelled my rising ambition; and thus humble I hope to remain until this important question is settled, and I know of a truth to whom I am most indebted for the elevated position I now occupy.

Three Slaves Liberated in Philadelphia—A United States Minister in Trouble.
[From the Philadelphia Ledger, July 20.] THREE SLAVES LIBERATED.—On Wednesday afternoon, quite an exciting scene occurred at the foot of Walnut street, on account of the liberation of three slaves. A gentleman from Virginia, on his road north for the purpose of embarking for Central America, was on board the steamboat Washington, with a female slave and her two sons. A short time before the starting of the boat for New York, some of the abolitionists in the city got wind of the affair, and a colored man accosted the party on the upper deck, and inquired of the woman if she was not aware that, by the laws of Pennsylvania, she had only to step ashore with her children, and they would be free.
At this juncture the master stepped forward and told the negro that he desired no interference with his business, and that the woman knew where she was going. The colored man replied that he did not desire to interfere with him, but that he wished to inform the woman of her rights.
The woman stated that she did not know she was free, and expressed a desire to be at liberty. The Virginian then said she could do as she pleased; if she wished to leave him she could go ashore. He then reminded her of the three children in Virginia, and asked her if she wished to be separated from them—"No, massa," was the reply, "but I want to free." The slaves were then seized by the negroes present and hurried ashore. This proceeding was, however, not accomplished without a scuffle.
The Virginian seized the colored man who had first accosted the woman, and also colli-ered a well-known citizen and prominent abolitionist, who had taken an active part in the matter.
The latter threw off the slave owner, who demanded of him whether "he would be responsible for these people." The Philadelphian replied: "I will be responsible for every shadow of legal claim you have upon them," and handed him his card.
The officer of the boat, who seemed puzzled to understand the proceedings, interposed to prevent disorder, while the Virginian went on shore and made an effort to obtain the assistance of the police, but no one interfered.
The woman and her two children were finally hurried up Dock street and put into a cab, amid the cheers of the crowd, and driven rapidly down town. The Virginian stated that he was minister to one of the Central America governments.
VALUE OF HEALTH.—Without health life is too short for its own purposes.
Shattered and broken by disease, man sinks to the grave, as if the sun should set suddenly in its course from mid-heaven! A few struggle on nearly to the termination of a natural life; but scarcely one wins the prize of an existence rounded and complete in its duration, its powers, and its accomplishments.—Water Cure Journal.
AHEAD OF THE MAINE LAW. The "East Prince" of China has issued a temperance proclamation announcing God's abhorrence of drunkenness, and prohibiting the use of wine, even in private, to all princes, nobles, and ministers of state, and to all people, men and women, on penalty of being beheaded. This Celestial Prince goes for no half-way measures.

Mr. Chase's Remarks on Accepting the Anti-Nebraska Nomination for Governor.
Mr. Chase, on being introduced to the convention by the President, said: Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention.
I know full well that it is because of no special merit or worth of mine that you have honored me with the nomination which has been announced to me by your committee, and it is this knowledge which exceedingly enhances my sense of the honor conferred, and of the responsibilities which it imposes. Ohio has many citizens better fitted for the position in which you would place me, and better qualified to bear aloft the standard of freedom during the approaching political contest. Conceding, however, as I do most cheerfully, to others superior abilities and better judgment, I yield to no one in sincere devotion to the great principles which you have this day promulgated.
On many public questions, not now directly in issue, I have had occasion heretofore to express my opinions in various forms. Those opinions remain on record and unchanged.
On the great issue now before the people, my opinions are expressed in the platform you have this day adopted.
The independence and sovereignty of the State, in her legislation and judiciary, must be asserted and maintained.
The spread of slavery, under all circumstances and at all times, must be inflexibly resisted.
Slavery in the territories must be prohibited by law.
On this point there is the most pressing need of union and resolution.
Kansas must be saved from slavery by the voters of the free States.
It was my fortune to bear some humble part in the memorable struggle which issued in the repeal of the Missouri prohibition. Upon that occasion, though among the most determined opponents of the Compromise of 1840, I declared in my place that I was ready to stand shoulder to shoulder with the supporters of those Compromises, now justly incensed by that violation of pledged faith, for the redress of that last and greatest wrong.
In this spirit I am prepared to act to-day. Side by side with all men who are willing to unite with me for the defence of freedom, I am ready to contend to the last for the rescue of the territories from slavery.
I would do no injustice to the slave States. All rights guaranteed to them by the constitution should be fully and cheerfully conceded. Whatever can be constitutionally done by the national legislature to promote their progress and improvement, should be unhesitatingly and ungrudgingly done.
We should insist only that, outside of slave states, we shall not be responsible for the maintenance of slavery and that the just and constitutional influence of the general government shall be exerted on the side of liberty.
The question of slavery in the States may then be safely left to the States themselves. The humanity, the justice, the wisdom of the people will, I trust, so dispose of it, that in the not far distant future a day will come when the sun, in all his course over our broad land, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, shall not behold a slave.
When Coleridge was asked what he thought of preaching against actual sin—smuggling for instance—he replied, "If I lived in an inland town, where nobody knew what smuggling was, of course I should say nothing about it; but if I lived in a seaport town where smuggling was the main sin of the people, I should preach against smuggling fifty-two Sundays every year." Men's feelings are always purest and most glowing in the hour of meeting and farewell; like the glaciers which are transparent and rosy-hued only at sunrise and sunset, but throughout the day, gray and cold.—Jean Paul.
Conversation is the great book of the world. It teaches the use of all other books, and learning is almost useless without it, and loses half its charm. Conversation brings nature's talent into practice, and gives it a proper finishing.
A leading brewer of Buffalo closed his business on the 4th of July. He was heard to say, "Selling liquor is an infelicitous mean business. No man knows how mean it is till he has given it up."
Forty-three Republican papers in Ohio have taken ground in favor of the nomination of Hon. S. P. Chase as the candidate of the Republican party of that State, for Governor.
Theodore Parker says that in America, unlike England, official greatness is not pre-ordained, though it does go by election.
The last National Division of the Sons of Temperance, added three new degrees to their order.
The spontaneous gifts of heaven are of high value, but the strength of perseverance gains the prize.
Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds. So said Socrates.

Very Important Information.
Dr. JONES, one of the most celebrated physicians in New-York, writes as follows:
Dr. CURTIS—Dear Sir—Having witnessed the excellent effects of your HYGEENA OR IS-LANDIA HYGEENA VAPOR AND HYGEENA VAPOR in a case of chronic bronchitis, and being much in favor of counter-irritation in affections of the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs, I can therefore cheerfully recommend your Medicated Apparatus as being the most convenient and effectual mode of applying anything of the kind I have ever seen. No doubt thousands of persons may be relieved, and many cured, by using your remedies.
You are at liberty to use this in any way you may think proper.
Respectfully, yours, &c., C. JOHNS, M. D.,

Prof. S. CENTER writes as follows:
GENTLEMEN—I have recently had occasion to test your Cherry Syrup and Hygeena Vapor in the case of chronic sore throat, that had refused to yield to other forms of treatment, and the result has satisfied me, that whatever may be the composition of your preparation, it is no imposition, but an excellent remedy. I wish, for the sake of the afflicted, that it might be brought within the reach of all.
New-York, Nov. 15, 1854.
Dear Sir—I think highly of Dr. Curtis's Hygeena, as a remedy in diseases of the throat and lungs. Having had some opportunity to test its efficacy, I am convinced that it is a most excellent medicine, both the Syrup and the Inhalant application to the chest.
