

BELLEVUE, N. T., July 20, 1855.

Messrs. Editors:—I would much rather some one who knows better than I, would give you a history of our new Territory, yet as I have promised, I must, perforce, do the best I can. Our City of Bellevue is about a mile from the west bank of the Missouri, and nearly opposite St. Mary's in Iowa. The lower part of the town contains a dozen houses, and a pretty large hotel in the course of erection. The other end, or the Mission part, has the Mission buildings and one or two small houses. Since the 15th of this month, the Mission house has been converted into a boarding house. The Indian school is given up, for a time; the Indians have gone to their reservation, and will not let their children stay here. The Presbyterian Board of Missions has brought a timber claim, and their agent started for St. Louis the first of this month to get a steam saw mill; he expected to have it in operation in two months from the time he left this place. It will help the place much. I think there is none on this side of the Missouri within nine miles, that is not Omaha. Cottonwood boards sell there at from thirty to forty dollars per thousand. Cottonwood makes boards about like hemlock; they are used mostly in building. There is some oak and walnut, but it is used sparingly. At Omaha they are using brick for building, and in Bellevue they are building some gravel houses. There is no gristmill here, except a small two-horse power one that belongs to the Mission. Any one who would bring one on would be a public benefactor; then we could get our own grain ground and need not ship it, and buy back poor flour at a high price. Most things except land are as high here as in the east. Wages are high; a common farm laborer, (what at home we would call a ploughboy,) gets eighteen or twenty dollars per month and board, and others in proportion. The country is quite rolling, the land is rich, in some of the valleys they have found the soil five feet deep; on the hills it is not so rich, though rich enough to produce good crops. This season has been very dry and warm, scarcely any rain; but the corn that was planted in season looks well. They just break up the prairie sod in the spring and plant the corn, and do nothing more until it is ready to take in. In this manner they can raise from twenty to fifty bushels to the acre. The water is limy. Stone coal has been found about a mile from the northern boundary of the town. It will be a great advantage, as wood is not very plenty. The Palladium was suspended some time in April; they talk of starting it again soon. The Nebraskan is a paper published at Omaha. There are two mails through Bellevue, one here and the other three times a week. The politicians are selecting their candidates, or rather the candidates are selecting themselves. Good by. M. E. H.

Messrs. Editors:—Among civilized and barbarous nations an attack and defense. In looking over the course of the Highland Patriot, we were surprised at finding certain communications purporting to be written by citizens highly indignant at the action of G. B. Overton and Sobieski Ross to act as Trustees of the Coudersport Academy. As the Patriot will be read by a class who are ignorant of the circumstances and the personal feelings between H. H. Dent and the above named individuals, we conceive of no more effectual method of disabusing the public mind, than to govern or crush is Mr. Dent's motto. Woe to the man who dares disobey his mandate. Difference in official action on the part of Lewis Harrison, Ross, and Overton was what we considered them obnoxious to Mr. D. Harrison, Ross and Overton never sought to be Trustees of the Academy. The position was voluntarily offered them by the stockholders. And we do not hesitate to declare, that they will perform their duty as efficiently and faithfully, with more integrity of purpose, than would the disappointed rivals and traducers. Mr. Dent's schemes were foiled. Hence the unjust and unprovoked attack through the columns of the Patriot, of which Mr. D.

W. C. James is the ostensible, but H. H. Dent the real editor. The result of the Trustees election indicates without any comment the estimation in which Mr. D. is held in this community. He is an ex-slaveholder, but still cherishes extreme Southern views, and through the influence of his wealth has undertaken to gather around him congenial spirits sufficient to control the political, educational, and social interest of the county. Devoid of those qualities necessary to a successful leader, he often finds himself in a very awkward position. Incapable of brooding disappointment, he knows of no other way to vent his spleen only in traducing the character of his superiors. As he is the principal aggressor, and the first to invade the sanctuary of private character, we beg of him to remain quiet while we get down to his level, and talk about a few of his antecedents. Sir, we have never witnessed a more injudicious attack on the private character of citizens. Had you been actuated by motives destitute of malice, had you been more fortunate in the selection of terms to express your vindictiveness, your weakness would merit sympathy, but now contempt. Although entrenched behind wealth accidentally obtained, do not presume it will always remain as the bulwark of perfidy. In your letter of resignation you uttered a most palpable falsehood, only demonstrating your incapacity to be consistent. Pensioned menials laud you for generous deeds, when you never experienced a benevolent emotion. With a character vulnerable at every point, yet too stupid to conceive the impropriety of assailing others. In short, you remain the highest instance of opportunity without improvement, and experience without profit. I have heard of prostitutes reproving immodesty, of misers denouncing parsimony, of Satan rebuking sin, but never before knew the saying so meanly exemplified. With the ample fortune and poor abilities you possess, we are unable to conceive how the use of them always results in such a large amount of disgrace. The arbitrary and capricious discipline of slave plantations can never be introduced here. There are men who employ themselves in flattery. Do not reckon me among that number. My business is not to flatter but to conquer your vanity. PERSONALITY. Coudersport, August 14, 1855.

School Celebration in Harrison.

EDITORS OF THE JOURNAL:—Being in the northeast part of the county last week, I had the pleasure of attending a delightful gathering of the schools in Harrison district on Friday. Under the direction of Dr. Masten, one of the directors, and other citizens the children with their teachers, and many parents and visitors, assembled in a grove near the Doctor's house. The exercises were opened with prayer by Elder Robinson, and appropriate singing by the teachers. Miss Dowd's school from the valley, exhibited first, and both teacher and pupils did themselves great credit. Miss Stone's school from the upper part of the valley, appeared next. Miss Stone is, we believe, a beginner in the arduous work of teaching, but she and her school kept up the interest unabated till the hour for refreshments. Then came Miss Susan Thomas and her flock from the Fork of the Cowanesque. Miss Thomas is one of a family of teachers whom we hope the directors of Harrison will long keep employed. Miss Eunice Thomas' school closed the entertainment, and that too in fine style, although the children were a little fatigued. The occasion was enlivened with fine singing from the schools and some good instrumental music. The day was a little cool, but far more agreeable than a sultry one would have been. All parties were evidently much pleased, and we doubt not, profited. Harrison will bear away the palm, if other districts are not stirring. The above celebration was the culmination of the interest felt in having good schools there the past summer, and the fruit of employing so many excellent and energetic teachers. Esto perpetua. Yours truly, P. Coudersport, August 13, 1855.

CHANGED.—Instead of the stereotyped phrase, "Sebastopol is not yet taken," the popular saying now is, "The Allies have not yet been taken!"

DEAR FRIENDS:—I do not live here always, perhaps if so, I might tire of quiet and peace, and call my home monotonous and dull. But coming here from the busy worry of daily life, to find rest for heart and brain in this retired spot, I write to you because there are many that I love and would gladly communicate with, who are, like myself, whirled round in the vortex of worldly care, and can only meet me when we step aside into some quiet path like those leading hither. Sometimes I think this world is a great deal too busy, and then I try to remember that it is in such whirling currents that griefs and heart-aches are drowned or hidden. Perhaps the time may come to me, when Fern Dell shall be a Ghost Walk of heart-breaking memories, and the worldliest, least sympathizing crowd shall be a refuge therefrom. If any of you to whom I write, bear this experience, you need not meet me here. Mercy forbid that I should darken the way or make thorny the path of any.

But you, dear friends, who love Nature in her wildness and her most graceful loneliness, who love the sound of winds and brooks, the songs and flight of birds and insects, the sweet voices of grass and flowers, the gambols of rabbit and squirrel, and the saucy glances of the field mice—you who love long evenings of reading or chat by a pleasant fire, and gentle strolls by the brookside, to you I write. Because in the body many miles separate us, and when they do not, many cares do. We have no time, when together, for that free, long, affectionate, heart-communication that friends need, that friendship longs for. How often have we all felt, after a few days visit from some long absent brother or sister or other dear one, that the heart-longing was but increased, the visit which we could not have done without, had been almost a mockery. We each held our own household or business care—we exchanged kind inquiries, talked of many things that were but of secondary interest, provided as we best could for the wants of the body, and parted, when the time came, with all the hoard of jewels—the precious inner life—unopened and untouched. Then comes the longing for that promised "better land" where "we meet to part no more."

This evening came a little group of friends from Coudersport, threading the cowpath by the river and coming down the south hollow. A happy, happy meeting, a dear little visit, and such may many others be. Blessings on all who have love and kindness in their hearts, all who feel for (with) the poor and the afflicted. Blessings on all the wicked and hard of heart; for they need blessing. GERTRUDE. Fern Dell, August 12, 1855.

EDITORS OF THE JOURNAL:—In your paper of the 9th inst., you state that Mr. H. H. Dent "has destroyed the peace and usefulness of his minister," and that "he has been doing his utmost for some time back to destroy his church." As the minister alluded to, and the Rector of the church in question, I have to say in reply, that I am aware of no facts which warrant you in making the above assertions. For the information of your readers, you will please therefore to publish this contradiction. With due respect, Yours, &c., JOHN B. PRADT. Coudersport, August 13, 1855.

Resignation of Dawson—His Successor.

The Pittsburgh Post of the 9th has the following in relation to the Hon. John L. Dawson: "Hon. John L. Dawson passed through here yesterday, on his way home, after an absence of several weeks. His appointment, which was entirely unsolicited and unexpected, was first made known to him while traveling homeward. "Highly as we know the compliment to be held, yet Mr. Dawson has no wish to change his citizenship. He intends to stick to the flag of our good old commonwealth, and will not exchange for that of any other State or Territory. He therefore declines the appointment." We learn by telegraph this morning that the President has already named ex-Governor Shannon, of Ohio, as Mr. Dawson's successor. He was in the last Congress and voted for the Nebraska territorial bills. Of course he was not returned again. His successor, Mr. Albright, a free-soiler, was elected by 2,200 majority in a district which had given Shannon a majority of 1,100 in 1853.

The President, in pursuance of his habitual policy of rewarding those whose constituents have condemned them, and in exemplification of his doctrine of popular sovereignty laid down in the Nebraska bill, has bestowed upon Mr. Shannon a place for which Reader was not sufficiently servile, nor Dawson sufficiently brave. Whether Shannon will accept is not yet known. We presume he will, of course. We know of no reason why he should not get on comfortably with Atchison and Stringfellow; if there had been any, we presume he would not have been appointed.

In going out of the State of Pennsylvania for a Governor of Kansas, the Administration gives us hopes that the Keystone State is getting disgusted with its Kansas policy. This suspicion is confirmed by the appearance of Governor Reader's name at the head of the columns of the Crawford (Pa.) Journal as a candidate for Canal Commissioner—Eve. Post.

He has adopted the ready-pay system, and will strictly adhere to it. CASH paid for Venison. GEO. MATHER. June 7, 1855.
