We do not speak of the subordinate

In the first rank stands W. H. Seward, of New York. We date say that the time has gone by, when his South. Ho is the most skillful and unrelenting enemy of the slave interest, and whether sincere, or insincere, the month of August, now so close at hand. must be regarded as a formidable an- li may, however, be done at almost any sea. tagonist. For ourselves, we regard him as a fanatic whose sincerity is as deep as the roots of his life, and who believes that, in advancing his political ambition, he is asserting the cause of humanity also. He is a man of fine and extensive attainments-a subtle and Machiavelian organizer, an orator whose full, Ciceronian, and somewhat florid style must always attract popular attention in a nation which loves eloquence as dearly as the United States. To those qualifications headds a deep political prescience which nothing can disturb, adaptability which, in these times of change and inconsistency is the most valuable gift of the thorough politician.

The rise and progress of Seward, from his first beginning as an obscure lawyer, to his present remarkable exaltation, is one of the most curious phenomena of modern political history. It does not require much insight to perceive that he is no casual waif, borne to an elevated place by the tide of party, but the artificer of his own fortune, in the construction of which he has displayed the most pliant subtlety, the most reckless daring, and an amount of genuine ability which cannot be mistaken for a moment. We are not writing a puff of Mr. Seward, but simply describing the foremost enemy of the South as he really is, and not the vulgar agitator which too many mistake him for. Is this a man to be despised or disregarded? Is it wise to lie abed, and dream of utter security, while such an engineer is mining under our outposts with the determination of springing the mine at his convonience!

Then, next in rank stands Sumner. of Massachusetts, No person, even the most prejudiced, will mistake him for a common-man. He was distinguished as a juris-consult of a high order before he became noted as an incendiary. His standing among the scholars of his State, prolific in fanatical men of letters, has been confessedly high for many years, and to considerable scholastic attainments he unites many popular accomplishments, which are equivalent to success in an era of agitation and revolutionary designs. Without the caution and long foresight of inding as those of his own stern will. | Journal. . It is true that Sumner is a poor and fallacious logician, but few will deny the charms of his brilliant rhetoric.

As Seward is the Robert Peel of Abolition, Sumper is the Macaulay. His want of direct logic is compensated for, by an excellent imitation of true dialectism, and the minds of the people are swaved oftener by the glittering appearances of argument than by argument itself. The poorest fallacies become facts among excited masses as we learn from the records of '49, when the splendid paradoxes of Lamartine were mistaken for the profound utterances of an oracle of statesmanship. There are days when the populace willingly accepts phrases for politics.

Passing by Wilson, "the false Acitophel" of the movement, we come to Hale of New Hampshire. In him we find a remarkable combination of popular qualities with an inexhaustible estimated weight of meat contained in fund of fanaticism. The granite hills and unyielding than his nature, and yet follows: he possesses as playful and trenchant a wit as Richard Brinsley Sheridan. He can always relieve a solemn subject by a good humored joke, and compel even his opponents to join in the responsive laugh—thinks in syllogisms and speaks in epigrams. Very few men in the Senate of the United States can match him in debate, for he is al- at 56 or 57 pounds; extra good, large

If his facts are sometimes metaphors, his metaphors are as often facts. It is true, that he has been in a minority of ters;" that is, the products of meat, after all." If Seward is the Robert estimated upon an average, 65 pounds overy article used by them in his line of business. He is prepared also to do all kinds of Macaulay of abolition, Hale may be fairly ranked as the D'Israeli. Recent events show that his influence is anything but decreasing in New Hampshire. And such are the leaders whom the South has henceforward to meet, foot to foot, and from whom she can expect no quarter, and to whom she should give none.-New Orleans Delta.

We learn a little of God's ways, but very little of his purposes.

STRAWBERRY CULTURE.

The success which has attended the efforts of Messrs. C. K. WRIGHT, of Portville, and H. Generals, whose sphere is the news- Enson, of this village, in the cultivation of this paper office-the Greeleys, Weeds, delicious fruit, during two or three seasons Danas and Bigelows-nor of the past, has induced several of our acquaintances guerillas who have done yeoman's in this vicinity to try their skill in the same diwork in the contest such as the Tap- rection. We know quite a number who are pans, Garrisons and Smiths-but of fitting their ground preparatory to setting out the recognized commanders who have the plants. It is a mistaken notion with most taken their seats among the rulers of people that so great a degree of care and nicety the land, and actually planted their is required in raising strawberries as to unfit banner staff on the floor of Congress ordinary tillers of the soil from undertaking to do it. Any one who can take care of corn or potatoes can raise strawberries if he will but try. It is an easy, pleasant and profitable task-one which any person not entirely dead talents or his perseverance can be to the luxury of seeing the growth of things denied either in the North or in the his own hand has planted, will instinctively fall in love with.

The best time for planting strawberries is son of the year. The best plants are those which have been formed by the rooting of the "runners," or shoots which are sent out from the parent plant. Such are young and vigorous, and take root easily and grow rapidly: The best soil for this fruit is a gravelly loam-

The land should be well drained, thought this will not be deemed an indispensable requisite by those not having the facilities for doing it. To every acre, or in the same proportion for a smaller plat of ground, should be applied twenty bushels of ashes, ten bushels of lime, and two or three pounds of salt. The ground should be well broken up-deep spading is hest-and animal manures should not be used. Leaf mould is the best, and this should be thoroughly incorporated with the soil. Some cultivators also mix the soil with refuse tanbark, claiming that it is a specific manure for this plant. All agree that the ground should be covered with this article, excepting a small space immediately around each plant. It keeps the ground moist and checks the growth of weeds. The rows should be eighteen inches apart, and the plants at least one foot apart .-A greater distance will often be found more convenient. After the plants are set the ground should be covered with an inch or more of tan-bark, and plentifully watered. When cold weather comes on, the strawberry beds should be covered with clean straw. In the spring remove the straw, and the plants are ready for the summer campaign. Some recommended the use at that time of a fertilizing agent to give the plants vigor, such for instance as sulphate of soda, sulphate of ammonia, or nitrate of potash. Keep the weeds out-by pulling them up, not by hoeing, which disturbs the roots and lessens the yield of fruit -see that they are bountifully watered-there is no danger of too much watering; and the remaining duties will consist principally in gathering the fruit, at which abad or indifferent hand cannot be found. The beds should be made over every three years.

Plants of the choicest varieties may be ob tained by express from the nurseries of Messrs ELWANGER & BARRY, Rochester, together with catalogues containing all useful information in regard to their cultivation. C. M. Sax-TON & Co., 152 Fulton-st., N. Y. City, will also send R. G. PARDEE's Manual of Strawberry Culture, postage free, for 50 cts., which also contains ample directions for the culture of grapes, blackberries, raspberries, &c. We wish that every reader who owns a farm or village lot might now make the necessary Seward, he possesses an equally hardy preparations for supplying himself with this position, as his bearing in Congress delicious fruit, which so many amply repays proves, and acknowledges no law so all the attention bestowed upon it.—Olean

FACTS ABOUT CATTLE.

It is a fact that all domestic animals can be improved in size and value. One hundred and fifty years ago, the average weight of cattle at the Smithfield market was not over 370 pounds, and that of the sheep 28 pounds. Now, the average weight of the former is over 800 pounds, and of the latter 80 pounds.

The average weight of cattle proper ly termed beeves, in the New York market, is about 700 pounds, and sheep 50 pounds.

The average live weight of the heaviest drove beeves, of 100 in number, ever bro,t to this market, 2,067 pounds, weighed from dry feeding in Illinois, last spring.

GREER PROVERBS ON HUMAN FOLLIES .-

HAVE SOMETHING TO DO, AND DO IT -The secret of all success in life, of all greatness, nay, of all happiness, is to live for a purpose. There are many persons always busy, who yet have no great purpose in view. They fritter away their energies on a hundred things, never accomplished any thing, because never giving their undivided attention to any one thing. They are like but-terflies that flit from spot to; spot, never gaining wealth; while the ant, who strictly keeps a certain circuit around her hole, gradually lays up stores for winter comfort. Such persons are doomed to be dissatisfied in the end, if they are not sooner; for they will find in the race of life, they have been passed by all who had a purpose. It is not only the positive drones, therefore, but the busy idle, that make a blunder of life for want of a purpose.
