brow. Job, the honest, upright, and patient, was a farmer; and his endurance ... has passed into a proverb.

Sucrates was a farmer, and yet wedded to his calling the glory of his immortal philosophy.

St. Luke was a farmer, and divides with Prometheus the honor of subjecting the ox to the use of man.

Cincinnatus was a farmer, the noblest Roman of them all.

Burns was a farmer, and the Muse found him at the plow, and filled his rsoul with poetry.

Washington was a farmer, and retired from the highest earthly station to aujoy the quiet of rural life, and present to the world a spectacle of Merinoes, at human greatness.

To these may be added a host of "others who sought peace and repose enthusiastic Lafayette, the steadfast SILKS and Dress Trimmings at Pickering, the scholastic Jefferson, the fiery Randolph, all found an Eldorado. of consolation from life's cares and troubles, in the verdant lawns that surrounded their homesteads.

A New Kind of Slave Trade.—A etter from Callao, Peru, says:

"The only business transacted at present, is the selling of Chinese slaves landing from American and English ships. Language is inadequate to express the horrible condition of these miserable wretches. Stolen from their homes and families, smuggled on shipboard without their consent, on the passage treated like brutes, they are brought to this coast, and sold to men who have no mercy, for a nominal term of eight years, although in many instances no term of service is mentioned. An American ship sailed from China with six hundred and five, and landed with four hundred and four, leaving two hundred and one who either died or drowned themselves on the passage. The average price for this cargo of human flesh, was two hundred and fifty dollars per head. The horrors of the African slave trade in its palmiest days, were nothing compared to this; for in other countries there are laws for the protection of the slave; but here the master is clothed with absolute authority, and ran govern his slaves as he sees fit. How men with souls and any human feeling can engage in so nefarious a business, I am at a loss to conceive; and yet this ressel is owned by white
