THE OLD JACKSON GUARD.

During the early part of Gen. Jackson's administration, it will be remembered that a bitter hostility sprung up between them and the South Carolina nullifiers under the lead of Mr. Calhoun. The latter were the extreme pro-slavery party. In the gradual submission of the so-called democratic party to the doctrine of slavery extension, during the past fifteen years, it has been compelled, in order to propitiate the southern propagandists, to prostrate every leader who stood high in the confidence of the Hero of New Orleans. The especial friends of Old Hickory have one by one been thrust out of the Democratic party of the present day.

The dynasty of John C. Calhoun survives its founder, and grows more powerful under the management of his successors than it ever was under his lead.

The Calhoun dynasty inherits the private griefs of Mr. Calhoun, and resolutely avenges them all. Where is Martin Van Buren, the favorite who supplanted Mr. Calhoun in Gen. Jackson's confidence, and obtained the succession? Expelled long since from the Democracy. Where is T. H. Benton, the mighty Senatorial Ajax that propelled the Jackson administration triumphantly over the ruins of Calhoun sedition and rebellion?—Utterly proscribed and cast out from the ranks of the Democracy.

Where is the remnant household of Gen Jackson—Andrew J. Donelson—his adopted son and cherished family favorite? Numbered no longer with the "faithful," but first refused honorable service in the party, and then driven over to the ranks of the Americans.

And lastly, where is Francis P. Blair, the editor of the Washington Globe, the organ of Gen. Jackson, and the great "thunderer" of his administration? He, too, after being for years ostracised with the rest of Gen. Jackson's devoted friends, turns up at last an exile from the Democratic party, and a volunteer recruit to what is now called the "Republican" party. Verily, Mr. Calhoun is avenged. His policy, even down to his hates, rules the National Democracy, and the present administration shapes its acts in accordance with the demands of the southern politicians on whom his mantle has fallen. The masters of the White House are Jefferson Davis, Orr, Atchison, and Toombs.—Manchester Democrat.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

We only give a synopsis of the President's message; more would be useless. Nearly half of it is devoted to Union saving, a species of political cant, which, however appropriate to the lower class of demagogues, is a little too low to form the staple of a President's message. It may be evident perhaps after a while, even to men in power, that the best way to preserve the harmony of Free States is, not to deal in lugubrious harangues and unmeaning glorifications, but to "love mercy, deal justly, and walk humbly with God." President Pierce's disquisition is about the same relation to union, that a lecture on rhetoric would have to a man who had taken a dose of strichnyne. Instead of seeking national health, by breaking the bands of the oppressed, new villanies are perpetrated every year, and safety is sought by pressing to our lips for a still deeper draught, the old quickish cup of union. This miserable policy has been pursued quite too long; the upright part of the nation is disgusted, and it is time that Presidents and all others understood that good morals and good government cannot be separated. Those who desire the permanence of our Union, should hasten to make it pure; for if stained with corruption, though all human causes should be inoperative, God from above will fight against it and dash it to pieces.—Northern Christian Advocate.

HENRY M. FULLER.—From the liberal press of Pennsylvania, there is but one opinion in regard to the course of the member of Congress from that District comprising the counties of Columbia, Wyoming and Montour. For that fleeting prize the Speakership, he sold himself to the South, in opposition to the views of his constituents, and the reward of his treason is coming back upon him with a force which must make his position anything but agreeable. His fate should be a lesson to all aspiring politicians, who for the sake of power are willing to forego their honor, their honesty and their position among men.—Pottsville Journal.
