AND

My heart is young again.

The windows of my soul I throw Wide open to the sun.

No longer forward or behind I look in hope or fear; But, grateful, take the good I find,

I plough no more a desert land, The manna dropping from God's hand

Rebukes my painful care. S. F. Hamilton, I break my pilgrim staff-I lav

Among the ripened corn.

Through fringed lids to heaven.

The south wind softly sigh, And calm, sweet days in golden haze Meit down the amber sky.

Not less shall manly deed and word

But smiting hand shall learn to heal,

All as God wills, who wisely heeds

Than all my prayers have told. Enough that blessings undeserved

His chastening turned me back, That more and more a Providence

Beyond the Father's sight ..-That care and trouble seem at last,

Like mountain ranges overpast, In purple distance fair,-That all the jarring notes of life

Seem blending in a psalm, And all the angles of its strife Slow rounding into calm.

And so the west winds play; and all the windows of my heart I open to the day!

MY PSALM.

I mourn no more my vanished years: Beneath a tender rain, An April rain of smiles and tears,

The west winds blow, and, singing low, I hear the glad streams run;

The best of now and here.

Aside the tolling oar:

The angel sought so far away
I welcome at my door. The airs of spring may never play

Nor freshness of the flowers of May Blow through the autumn morn; Yet shall the blue-eyed gentian look

Shall see its image given; The woods shall wear their robes of prais

The graven flowers that wreathe the swo Make not the blade less strong.

To build as to destroy; Nor less my heart for others feel That I the more enjoy.

To give or to withhold, And knoweth more of all my needs

That, wheresoe'er my feet have swerve

Making the springs of time and sense Sweet with eternal good,-That death seems but a covered way

Through Memory's sunset air,

And so the shadows fall apart,
