of another beloved friend—struck down to attend May 23, while yet the daw of his youth was upon him, like the carly and tender flower nipped ere it was fully blown by the uutimely and chilling frost. He was truly the son of many sorrows, as from his early years he was afflicted with disease of the heart which affected this entire constitution and eventually brought him to a premature grave. His sickness was marked in a most wonderful degree with the graces of the christian character; and seldom have we been permitted to witness, even in the death of the aged who have "come to the grave like as a shock of corn cometh in his season," the same calm resignation and submission to the will of God; with "a desire to depart and be with Christ," which attended the sickness and death of this dear boy. "Lovely and pleasant" in his life, he was none the less so in his death. The severe bodily trials which he endured seemed to purify, as with fire, $\frac{\sqrt{\text{Stations}}{\text{Roller's}}$ \allele{\text{Attentions}} \allele{\text{Atte wonderful degree with the graces of the endured seemed to purify, as with fire, the soul, and work for it "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" when it should be released from its "earthly house and have a building of God, an house and have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the purchases from the Eastern Frectories for Cath, we as the country of the purchases from the Eastern Frectories for Cath, we as the country of the countr Heavens." That none but a spirit could dwell in their light O! not like the smiles that here glow on the check, To hide the deep anguish no language can speak.

"In Heaven there's rest," earth's happiest hour, Fades softly away, like a morning flower; THERE, fadoless the bowers included the skies, THERE, it both no end, and time never flies. THERE, nature is freed from its carliest stain, THERE, love bath no sorrow and life hath no pain.

"In Heaven there's rest" oh, how deep that repose! Life's bitterness pass'd, with its follies and woes, Its passions all hushed like the waves of the deep When tempests expire and winds are asleep, And only soft airs and sweet odors arise Like the evening incense that flow to the skies.

THERE, sounds breatho sweet music, "in Heaven there's rest;"

I long to escape to that land of the blessed, Inspired by the prospect through life's busy day, To ACE and to SUFFER to WATCH and to PRAY; Then gladly exchange when the summons is given The tumult of earth for the calmness of Heaven.'

DIED .- In Brady township, on the 14th instant, Abraham Rishel, aged 24 years. When all around is calm and still,

When not a sound is heard, I look away to Zion's hill, Where not a foo is feared.

Yes, while alone, and in my room, I think of joys above; I think of new Jarusalem

Where there is endless love. Thy starry skies and silver moon Soon I shall see no more; On me a day of glorious noon

Shall beam for evermore. Sweet night; O, when my last farowell I take of thee my friend. May it be with the saints to dwell in bliss that no'er shall and. O, yes, I hope in heaven above.

Mid its refulgent light, While basking in the saviour's love, To think of thee sweet night.

Sweet hast thou been indeed to me. But sweeter for that day Which shall include eternity, And thou hast fled away.

Sweet night, when we from others part No more to meet again, I'll think of thee with grateful heart, Where endless days shall reign.
